JAPAN CHANGES LIKE A WEATHERVANE

JOINS THE UNITED STATES COMES BACK TO FIRST LOVE

Deserts England and Joins America For Cruiser Limit—Insists That World's Interests Are Best Served By Adhering To the Proposals of the United States At Geneva—Dramatic Move Disconcerts Old John Bull.

Suddenly intervening in the Anglo-American difficulty over cruiser tonnage at Geneva, Japan Wednesday night not only supported the American contention for a low limitation, but insisted that world interests would best be served by adhering to the original minimum figures of the United States of 250,000 tons.

Even British self control was shaken by this unexpected wholehearted advocacy of the American position, which was made at an informal meeting.

British plenipotentiaries seemed stunned for a moment; then W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty, is understood to have declared: "These figures are impossible as a basis of discussion."

This development has in a dramatic way given a new angle to the tripartite naval conference, and means that Great Britain now must convince Japan and the United States that a high cruiser tonnage—upward of 600,000 tons—is justifiable.

It may mean increasing chances of failure of the conference for any treaty at Geneva must have Great Britain's approval, and the British are understood to be determined to maintain powerful cruiser fleets.

Altho Admiral Saito suggested certain modifications of the projected treaty to meet special Japanese needs it was thought that none of these requests would present difficulties for solution.

If a faithful account of the Geneva negotiations ever is written, some observers feel that it will reveal to the world that a great Anglo-American treaty has been enacted.

The thread of the play, judging from reliable accounts, is this—that Great Britain, which has held the mastery of the seas for centuries, intends to maintain this mastery and can see neither justice nor wisdom of a youthful nation across the seas, the United States, wishing to lay down fleets equaling those of Great Britain.

Great Britain contends that a high cruiser strength is essential and vital to the needs of her country, especially to give assurance that Great Britain shall not starve because of the cutting off of food supplies at distant points.

The United States apparently gives recognition to Britain's peculiar economic position, but insists that America, like Britain, must maintain communications with the outlying points of the earth for those broad economic reasons connected with the position of the United States as a great world power.

Wednesday's private meetings between the American and British delegates proved disappointing, because the British, it is understood, expressed complete dissatisfaction with the new American suggestion for a maximum cruiser tonnage of 400,000 tons.

It was even reported on good authority that there was talk during the lively conversation as to who would be responsible before world opinion if the conference should collapse and that the British delegates more than hinted that responsibility would fall on the shoulders of the United States.

The British maintained that some fault lies with the Americans because they failed to perceive what the British regard as the wisdom of cutting down the sizes of individual warships. The American delegates insisted that the United States cannot be expected to build warcraft poorly suited to American national needs, and pointed out the immensity of the building program which would be involved for the United States in accepting the British program of approximately 600,000 tons in cruisers. The situation, from the American standpoint, was that the American delegation either would have to subscribe to a treaty which would give Great Britain about double the cruiser strength of the United States, or to a treaty which would establish parity on the basis of 600,000 tons.

Apparently the American delegates believed that neither solution would be approved by the American people.

DONAHEY WILL RETIRE IN 1928, LETTER SAYS.

"I expect to retire from public life at the end of my incumbency."

This sentence in a letter from Governor Donahey to George E. McCormick, editor of the Lima Star, is included in the closing paragraphs of a letter which was reproduced in a recent issue of the Lima Star.

Included in the reproduction was that of the envelope showing it was addressed to Mr. McCormick and bore the postoffice stamp of June 22, 1927.

Oxford—When their auto struck a telephone pole on the pike near here and caught on fire, Mrs. R. Harvey Cook, 70, wife of Dr. R. H. Cook owner of the sanitarium and her son, Dr. George H. Cook, 30, were burned and cut seriously yesterday. The mother and son were caught in the burning car and their clothing became ignited before aid could be given them. Passing motorists took them to the sanitarium where they were treated.

Cincinnati—John Franken, 48, city policeman, died early today of a gunshot wound in the abdomen suffered late Monday in an encounter with a drug crazed Negro in which another policeman and two Negroes were shot and a Negro woman fell dead of heart disease. The crazed Negro, who gave his name as John Rucker, 46, is reported dying of skull fracture. Sherman Yearion, 24, the other policeman shot, is said to be recovering.

Gallipolis—Mrs. Susan Hall, 20, widow of a Civil war veteran, died in a hospital here today after a fall that broke her hip. She leaves many relatives in Ohio, West Virginia and California.

Youngstown—City and police officials and Detectives David Thomas and Nicholas Dalley, against whom charges of beating prisoners have been sworn, are to be questioned by Charles H. Sisson, special representative of Governor Donahey. Sisson announced the investigation will probably be complete tonight and the report for the governor completed tomorrow afternoon unless the case assumes an unexpected turn.

Columbus—William F. Mitchell, 44, a taxicab driver was arrested by police today in connection with the death of 20-month old Henrietta Wentzel, who was killed by a hit-skip driver last night. The child was struck as she attempted to follow her father across the street.

DAYTON MAN TO BE TAKEN "FOR A RIDE"

Dayton police have learned of a plot to take C. D. Zellers, Dayton district superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, "for a ride."

Zellers, who is said to have been instrumental in causing federal raids in Dayton during the weekend that netted 27 prisoners, also said he had been informed that a plot to kill him had been made.

The plot to kill Zellers is alleged to have originated with a known bootlegger, who is associated with the underworld of Cleveland. Police refused to discuss their tip, but said they were on the lookout for imported gunmen.

Zellers appeared to take the threat lightly.

THE LIBRARY QUESTION IS NOT SETTLED

Board of Control May Furnish Money, or the Hat May be Passed on Outside.

A possibility of a deficiency appropriation by the controlling board to care for the expense of the state library board adjourned without taking definite action until the opinion of the attorney general is obtained.

Governor Donahey made recommendations to the board for placing the books in college libraries and transferring its functions to them. Representatives from these colleges were present at the meeting Wednesday and said their own libraries offer problems that are difficult to meet.

Most of them declare their libraries are crowded and have outgrown the quarters assigned to them, but offered any assistance they might be able to give.

The governor vetoed the appropriation because there was not enough revenue to meet all needs, he declared, and said he believed the functions of the state library could be carried on by the college administrations in a more efficient manner.

Representatives from numerous clubs were present and voiced their disapproval of any plan to distribute the library. They declared it impossible to move the books and functions to college libraries without an additional expense that would equal the amount of the appropriation.

C. A. Dyer, legislative agent of the Ohio Farm bureau federation and the Ohio State grange, told the board that in event the deficiency appropriation could not be made, and if the board would agree not to distribute the library, he stood ready to bring the forces he represents to work on a proposition that will provide money from outside to keep the library in operation.

He declared he had information that shows a great number of clubs and civic organizations will provide money to operate the library on a small scale at least. He was not prepared to state, he said, whether the amount of the original appropriation would be obtained.

Under the governor's plan the traveling library section of the State library would be divided among the four state normal colleges at Bowling Green, Kent, Athens and Oxford, each to serve its section of the state.

The archaeological and historical books would be transferred to the library of the Archaeological and Historical society in Columbus, and the remainder of the books, including the legislative reference work, would go to Ohio State university.

It was expected that definite action will be taken by the board at its next meeting, July 13.

One-Horned Rhinoceros Is Found in Java Jungle

Berlin.—A scaly monster of the pre-human ages of the earth, surviving into modern times on the swampy fastnesses of southern Java, is reported to the scientific journal, Die Umschau, by Dr. P. Vageler.

It is described as a one-horned rhinoceros, related to a form already known elsewhere in the East Indies, but differing from it in that its hide is closely covered with small, horny scales. It also has enormous front teeth, like those of the hippopotamus. It has often been described by the natives under the name "Tanggiling," which means "scaly beast," but Europeans were incredulous. Finally photographs were brought out of the jungle showing the animal.

Long Forgotten Isles

Somebody in Whitehall has discovered that at least one group of the British Isles has not yet been surveyed and officially mapped, and a government expedition is being sent to St. Kilda to do the job. Forty-three persons, sharing five surnames among them, dwell on the main island of the group, which is about 100 miles west of the mainland of Scotland.

Ice "Sinks" Airplane

The great obstacle in the way of trans-Atlantic flight by airplane is ice, the same element that bothers the seamen. It is not that the icebergs get in the way, but when flying through a cold mist the ice forms quickly on the wings and by filling in the curvatures changes the contours. This will sometimes "sink" an airplane in eight minutes.

Canary on the Wire

Among the patrons of a telegraph company in Kansas City, Mo., one day was a negro woman. "You folk send flowers by telegram, don't you?" she asked. "Yes," "Well, I wants you all to send this here canary to Van Buren, Ark.," she said, lifting a caged canary to the counter.

First Lawyer—You say his speech carried conviction?
Second Lawyer—It did! His client got five years.

GERMAN PLANES

Were So Few That Aces Had To Double Up.

So scantily equipped were the German air forces at the beginning of the World War that even such aces as Baron Manfred von Richthofen were forced to take turns at flying the few available one-seater planes, points out Floyd Gibbons, the noted war correspondent, in an article in this week's Liberty. After much preliminary flying in two-seaters which, the author explains, von Richthofen thoroughly disliked, he was finally assigned to a single-seater Fokker.

"But air equipment was not plentiful," the writer continues, "and he had to share the new machine with a fellow pilot, who was equally ambitious to get away from two-seaters and cruise as an individual flying unit. The joint ownership of the new plane was unsatisfactory to both Richthofen and his comrade. Each feared that the other one would smash the plane. One flew it in the morning and the other flew it in the afternoon."

"Richthofen made his first trip without encountering an enemy plane. His comrade flew it that afternoon and that was the last Richthofen ever saw of it. But he became the sole owner of the next single-seater issued to the squadron."

Milestones In The Canning Industry

THE invention of a means of preserving foods was made not with the idea of benefiting housewives, but to save soldiers and sailors from scurvy, caused by lack of vegetables and fruits in the diet. It was made in France in 1809 when Napoleon offered a prize for such an invention.

This prize was won by Nicholas Appert, and marks the first milestone in an industry that has developed into an invaluable asset in housekeeping.

It was war again, the Civil War in America, that stimulated inventions to meet the need for more canned foods. After many experiments a way was found to increase the temperature of boiling water so that food could be processed more quickly. Because of the increased output during the war, the availability of foods in tins became more generally known, but as much of the work of preserving them had to be done by hand, they were too dear for the average household.

However, in 1876, an inventor named Howe discovered a means of closing cans by machinery, thus diminishing the cost, and bringing the industry to another important milestone in its progress.

The hole-and-cap, or solder cans, were still used however, though with many minor improvements, until about 1907, when the "sanitary can," the climax of a series of inventions, was put on the market. This can is closed by machinery which forms interlocking seams, crimping the edges together. The perfecting of a golden enamel lining which preserves better the color of certain foods, red fruits in particular, is the latest milestone reached by the canning industry.

In 1913 the whole business of canning was put on a strictly scientific basis by the establishment of a scientific bureau by the National Canners' Association, a step which has given to all the world a sense of complete security and satisfaction in the use of canned foods. War for the third time, the World War, gave a great impetus to the consumption of canned foods when our soldiers needed healthful diet here and abroad.

Lesson for July 10

SAMUEL'S FAREWELL

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel, Chap. 12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thy loving kindness is before mine eyes and I have walked in Thy truth.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Samuel the Faithful Servant.
JUNIOR TOPIC—An Old Man's Advice.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Make a Clean Record.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Righteousness in Public Life.

Samuel means "asked of God." God gave him in answer to his mother's prayer. She promised to give him back to God. In his early childhood his mother cared for and taught him. At an early age she handed him over to the care of Eli to minister unto the Lord in the Tabernacle. While he was thus engaged God called him. He responded to this call and spent a long life in useful service to God and his nation as judge and prophet. Our lesson today is his farewell address.

1. Samuel's Challenge to the People (vv. 1-5).

(1) Reminder of the way the king had been given (v. 1).

He showed that they were directly responsible for the change in government. Though keenly feeling the reflection upon himself, and their ingratitude to God in their demand for a king, he had not resisted their wish.

2. Review of his own administration (vv. 2, 3).

(1) Walk from childhood (v. 2). Samuel's was a remarkable life; from childhood to old age he had lived an upright and pure life. (2) Career as judge and ruler (v. 3). He boldly challenged them to show where and how he had even in the smallest matters defrauded or oppressed anyone.

3. The vote of confidence by the people (vv. 4, 5).

It was Samuel's right as he laid down the reins of government to have his record vindicated and to have his integrity established beyond a doubt, so that no evil-minded man could ever be able to cast reproach upon him.

II. Samuel Reviews God's Dealing From the Time of Moses (vv. 6-15).

He reasoned with them concerning the good hand of the Lord upon them from the time of Moses. Though they with ingratitude turned from the Lord and demanded a king like the other nations, He had acceded to their request and set a king over them.

1. National prosperity conditioned by obedience (v. 14).

Though they had displeased God in choosing a king, if they would fear the Lord and render obedience, national prosperity would still be given. Would that the nations today could see that obedience to God is the only way to prosperity! Nations should find out God's will and then bring themselves into harmony therewith. God's law must be obeyed by the rulers as well as the subjects.

2. Disobedience to God meant the nation's ruin (v. 15).

It is folly to ask God's blessing upon a nation while it is living in rebellion against Him. True statesmanship is to find out God's will concerning the nation and so direct that in all its laws and customs there may be harmony with that will.

III. Samuel's Own Vindication (vv. 16-19).

This was such a critical hour in the history of the nation that Samuel sought to indelibly impress its meaning on their hearts. This he did by means of the thunder and rain out of season. Harvest time was not the season for thunder and rain, so when it came at the call of Samuel the people were affrighted. They saw it as an example of God's mighty power which, if directed against them, would destroy them in an instant.

IV. Samuel's Gracious Response (vv. 20-25).

1. "Fear not—serve the Lord with all your heart" (vv. 20-22).

Samuel did not minimize their sin, but assured them that if they would serve the Lord wholeheartedly He would not forsake them. The ground of their hope was in the faithfulness of God in keeping His covenant. "For His name's sake" shows that God's honor is at stake.

"God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you" (v. 23). Though the people had rejected Samuel, yet he had such magnanimity of soul that he had not allowed their ingratitude to stop his intercession for them. Such failure he regarded as sin for himself. He assured them that in spite of their sin their one concern should be to fear the Lord and serve Him wholeheartedly.

EAGLES LOST TWO GAMES

To the Newark Team Sunday Afternoon Being Shutout In Both Games.

The Circleville Eagle team lost both ends of the double header played Sunday against the Newark Orange Crushes, being shutout in each contest while the visitors were collecting ten runs in the first fray and one in the closer.

Smith, the Newark pitcher, did a nifty iron man stunt, pitching both games, each seven innings, and allowing the Roundtowners only one safe blow in each contest. In the first game Terry secured a scratch hit off the third baseman's glove and in the other contest Bill Donahue drove out a nice double to left center.

George Kanavel was on the mound in the first contest and in addition to being touched up for several safe hits was overly liberal with free passes to first, issuing seven bases on balls and hitting one batter. In addition he was given very sloppy support. In the second game Smith and Plank both pitched masterly ball, but a bad break gave the visitors a one run edge that was not overcome, although Circleville had two scoring chances in the fourth when Thompson tried to steal third with two out and was caught and in the sixth when Terry reached third on a walk and a wild throw trying to catch him at second, but was caught at the plate when Miller grounded to the third baseman.

On next Sunday the Eagles play at West Jefferson.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN HIMROD.

George Himrod received a telegram this morning from Wauchula, Florida, apprising him of the death last night of his brother, John. Deceased had been in failing health for over a year and recently underwent an operation in the Jacksonville hospital, being removed to his home over a week ago. He and his family visited his sister, Mrs. E. S. Stephens, and brothers, George and Ralph, in this city last summer enroute to Florida from Colorado, where he had been for his health. Deceased was a son of Edward and Lucretia (Koch) Himrod, and was 46 years of age. Besides his wife and son, he is survived by his mother, who is visiting her daughter and sons in this city, two other sisters, Mrs. Geo. K. Smith, Mrs. Luther Bostwick, and two other brothers, Charles and Turney, all of Wauchula.

There are three well-known phrases in which reference is made to angels. These are: "Tears such as angels weep," "Fools rush in where angels fear to tread," and "Like angel visits, few and far between." The first is from Milton, the second from Alexander Pope and the third from Thomas Campbell.

CONFERENCE
OF LAWYERS
IN COLUMBUS

To Discuss Ways and Means
to Keep State Library
Open—May Land in Court.

Protestants against the closing of the state library, which became a fact on the morning of July 1, may carry their objections to the extent of making it a matter of court determination. This plan is under serious consideration. It has progressed so far that a conference of leading attorneys of Columbus was held to discuss the proper course of procedure.

If the question is raised in the courts, it will start in the supreme and probably be thru an application for a writ of mandamus to compel the governor to show cause why he closed the library or asking for an order to compel the state board of control to appropriate money for its continuance, on the ground that an emergency has arisen and it has the authority to meet the public demand for the library's further operation.

The question of whether it would be possible to meet the situation thru action in the courts arose after a prominent local attorney, who was formerly connected with the state administration in prominent way, had called at the library to consult books essential in a matter of litigation. Finding it closed he was compelled to send away for the books he wanted. Disappointed and incensed he immediately called a conference of attorneys to see what could be done and the manner in which to proceed.

He announced he was in all seriousness about the matter and would undoubtedly be done.

The feeling of opposition to the closing of the library is growing and sufficient funds would be subscribed by private parties to insure its continuance if Attorney General Turner had not held this would be impossible under the law, much as he would like to see the library continued.

Colorado Beetle Is Most Serious Pest

Add Arsenate of Lead to Regular Bordeaux Spray.

Two pounds of arsenate of lead added to the regular bordeaux spray mixture will control potato bugs effectively. Those who have calcium arsenate and a cotton duster may use these effectively but the man who depends on picking the bug to save his potatoes has a hopeless task.

"The Colorado potato beetle is a serious pest of potatoes," says C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at the North Carolina State college. "The plants are first attacked by the over winter beetles and later by the first generation of slugs. If the pest is not poisoned, the plants are soon ruined, leaving the stems which become dry and black. No grower should permit the bugs to damage his crop. Control measures are simple and effective. The best remedy is to use two pounds of arsenate of lead with the bordeaux mixture made with four pounds of bluestone, four pounds of stone lime and 50 gallons of water."

Mr. Brannon states that the arsenate of lead will poison the bugs while the bordeaux will repel flea beetles and leaf hoppers. Paris green will not give as good results as the arsenate of lead as a poison for the beetles.

Several applications of poison will have to be made and the fields should be watched closely to see that the beetles are kept under control.

Good Stand of Alfalfa

Kills Canada Thistles

That a good stand of alfalfa will destroy Canada thistle in three years was revealed by a study of eleven successful demonstrations recently made by A. A. Hansen of Purdue university.

The study of the demonstrations which were located in six different counties in Indiana and involved 22 acres of thistles scattered over large areas of farm land, showed that alfalfa will successfully subdue the thistles only where good stands of the legume are secured. Since more than one year is required to do the job, a hardy variety of alfalfa such as the Grimm or Ontario Variegated is essential. Weakening the thistles by fall plowing, by thoroughly preparing the seed bed and by cutting with a hoe while the alfalfa is young, is also necessary to enable the legume to get ahead of the thistles.

The frequent cutting, the vigorous spreading alfalfa root system and the heavy shade cast by the legume account for the ability of the alfalfa to subdue the prickly thistles. The method is of no value on sour, wet soils or where conditions are otherwise not suitable to alfalfa growing, and seed inoculation is necessary to secure the type of alfalfa growth necessary to success.

Blighted Chestnut Tree

Aids Fence Post Supply

Chestnut trees that are partially or entirely killed by the blight lose their bark in two or three years and then the trunk season-checks and soon decays rapidly. For this reason, Prof. J. A. Cope, extension forester at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y., says farmers who are cutting their annual supply of fence posts or grape stakes should use chestnut. He says it is better to cut the posts and store them for future use if there is no need or market for them now than to let them stand and waste.

The blight which attacks this tree has covered the natural range of the species in the entire state and, even in Chautauque county which was the last to be hit, signs of its attack may be seen. Professor Cope says, "It is doubtful if a single sound, living tree is still standing in the rest of the state."

As for other uses of chestnut timber, companies erecting communication or power lines need poles, so trees that are large enough may be sold for that purpose. Sound, wormy chestnut logs are in demand also, for the wood is considered an excellent base for high grade veneers.

Agricultural Facts

The main object of cultivation is to control weeds.

Rows of garden vegetables are better than rows of druggist's bottles on the shelf.

Whoever buys and plants cheap seeds needs no sermon on gambling—he is sure to learn by loss.

Rape or soy beans, sown in separate fields or in the cornfield, make excellent fall pasture for lambs.

Second-year sweet clover that is to be cut for hay should be mowed with the sickle bar high when the first flower buds appear.

A man who does not read has only his own experience to guide him; a man who does read has the experience of the world as a guide post.

Soil fertility limits fields, yields limit profits, and profits limit rural life and prosperity. Build up soil fertility with crop rotations and applications of inexpensive fertilizers.

H. G. STEVENSON, SECRETARY, MAKES EXHAUSTIVE REPORT

Activities of Chamber of Commerce During the Past Year Are Recited—Body Has Taken An Interest In All Things That Were For the Betterment of City And County—Several Matters of Importance Still Pending—Report of Treasurer.

Secretary Harry G. Stevenson in his report to the chamber of commerce Tuesday evening, July 5, said, in part:

"I am sure that after looking over the activities of this chamber for the past year any 'Doubting Thomas' will be convinced that this organization is doing a good work and that it is entitled to the support of each and every citizen of Circleville and Pickaway county."

Under the head of services to business interests, he said that one of the members, The Mid-Box company, appealed for help in locating baled straw for their operation during the winter. The officers drafted a letter to be sent to all chambers of commerce and boards of trade throughout this state, asking them to advise us of names of shippers of baled straw in their communities. The response showed the wonderful spirit of co-operation and several hundred names were given to the company.

In November, the president appointed a committee to call upon the merchants of this city and secure their Christmas trees to be placed on the sidewalks and illuminated during the Christmas season. They reported the sale of 88 trees.

At this same time, it was voted to spend $30 for lighting of the Pumpkin Show streets lights.

About the first of May, the Citizens Telephone company filed a new rate schedule with the Public Utilities commission of Ohio, asking for an increase in their telephone rates. President Jeffries appointed an investigation committee and a resolution of protest was mailed to the commission. A hearing will be held October 18.

On the subject of cooperation with other bodies, he said, that the Ohio State university had a "Meat Train" in this city and this was sponsored by the Farm Bureau but a committee from this body worked hand-in-hand with their committee and the fact that 1604 persons called at the train is enough evidence to produce to show that their work was well done.

The Farm Bureau asked the county commissioners for help toward paying the salary of a county farm agent. The commissioners asked for an expression from the Rotary club and chamber of commerce. President Jeffries appointed a committee to call upon the commissioners and the request of the Farm Bureau was granted.

In January, the chamber and the Farm Bureau sponsored the Second Annual Farmers institute which was very successful. The sum of $75 was paid by this body toward the expenses.

Our organization assisted the Farm Bureau in the promotion of Livestock day, June 4, and this was declared a success.

This spring the state board of health ordered the gates to Logan Elm park pad-locked on account of the sanitary condition. President Jeffries cooperated with others and the necessary improvements were made and the park was reopened.

In the matter of traffic and transportation, Secretary Stevenson said that this organization approved the application of the Ohio Transit company to operate a bus line between this city and Lancaster, thru Amanda.

The president appointed a committee to appear before the utility commission of Ohio to protest the granting of a license to the Cannon Ball Bus company, to operate a line of buses between Portsmouth and Columbus, thru this city. The license was not granted.

One of the largest shippers of live poultry in this city, and a member of this body, reported that the express service on the evening northbound N. & W. train was not satisfactory. This office secured complaints from the various shippers and laid them before the officials of the Norfolk & Western railway and the service was greatly improved.

Owing to the congested traffic, a committee from this chamber called upon the city officials and asked them to place traffic lights at the main street crossings. Our committee was informed that the city had no funds and the committee called upon the business people and secured sufficient money to purchase and install five traffic lights. In their report, the committee thanked the management of the Ohio Utility company for the many favors and kindnesses shown them.

Direction signs, at the suggestion of the chamber of commerce, have been placed at four cross-roads on the Jackson pike leading to this city on the new state route 104.

During the past winter, the road to Stoutsville became impassable and our president prevailed upon the county commissioners to improve this road. He said that the matter of the pollution of the Scioto river by the city of Columbus, a resolution was sent to the state board of health by the secretary, asking for an investigation and this matter is pending and our committees are working faithfully and hard on the clearing of the waters of the Scioto and city and county officials have been asked to cooperate in the matter of the pollution of streams in this county.

On the subject of legislation, the secretary said that Representative Marion and Senator Chappelle were asked to favor the adoption of Eastern time and also the gasoline tax of an additional one cent a gallon, and they were asked to oppose the bill taking the licensing of busses and trucks out of the hands of the Utilities commission. The first two bills became laws and the other was defeated.

Representative Marion was requested to oppose any change in the law in reference to the publication of the detailed statement of the expenditures of the county commissioners. This bill, however, became a law.

Under the head of education, he stated, that every one who has attended our dinner meetings will agree that much educational work has been done along the lines of the work of public officials and the operations of the various industries of this city. To enumerate the various speakers and their subjects would be too long and too tiresome.

Among the donations and contributions were: the use of our offices to the local Red Cross until July 1 of this year; assisting the American Legion in staging their annual Community Christmas tree; about $30 was collected to help defray the expense of buying 5,000 sticks of candy to be given by Santa Claus upon the occasion of his visit to this city with his reindeer, and to the sufferers in the Mississippi river disaster $10.

On the other side of the picture we see a large United States flag, a gift to the Chamber of Commerce by our president, Thomas F. Jeffries.

The secretary, under the head of honors, mentioned the banquet held in honor of Pickaway county's Master Farmer, John C. Stevenson. This was a wonderful get-together meeting of farmers and business men.

Another case where honor was shown was when the chamber requested the business men to display the National colors when the War Pictures were being shown in this city, under the auspices of the American Legion.

It is a matter of regret that we are unable to give the secretary's report in full, as it was carefully prepared and showed in a most convincing way that the Chamber of Commerce has been very helpful to our city and county; but the best that we could do was to point to some of the high spots in this splendid resume of the activities of this splendid organization.

Treasurer Fred R. Nicholas reported that he had on hand July 1, one year ago $169.08; that dues collected amounted to $1,405, making a total of $1,574.08; expenditures $1,548.65, leaving a balance of $25.43.

Malay Peninsula

The whole of the Malay peninsula, from the southern boundary of Siam to the Strait of Singapore, is known as the Straits Settlements. It includes Singapore, Penang, Malacca, Labuan, Cocos island and Christmas Island. The settlements have an entire area of about 1,600 square miles. They form a British crown colony.

Cotton Again in Fashion Picture

Fabric Is Popular in Paris for Sports and Spectator Costumes.

The fact that cottons are regaining their former position in summer fashions is recorded by the Woman's Home Companion, and is good news to the many women who like the crisp look and feel of a cotton dress for hot-weather wear. Paris, after making cotton an outcast from the fabric family for several seasons, has brought it again to the fore, especially for sports wear and spectator costumes. For golf, an English cotton print in a flower and geometric pattern is attracting attention, while pique is very chic for tennis. Summer dresses of printed batiste are boil-proof, tub-proof and sun-proof.

The dress on the left is designed for the older woman, to whom the square neck is always becoming. Groups of tucks at the shoulders and skirt front give just the right amount of fullness. A nice effect has been obtained by the pointed line where waist and skirt join, which suggests a yoke when the dress is belted. There's a small vest portion beneath the front opening and a flower of the dress material for the left shoulder.

The dress on the right, which has the young girl in mind, makes use of the present vogue for bows, placing one at the shoulder and another at the waist, where it emphasizes the unusual waistline treatment.

"Linge de plage," as the French call their beach costumes, may be for either sun or sea. Mary Nowlitzky, who has the facility for combining mediums in an unusual manner, has created a "sun suit" of beige crepe de chine which expresses the present-day freedom of color and line. Over it she poses a sleeveless coat of yellow eponge edged with raffia and inlaid with points of multicolored crepe de chine. To complete the costume there is a rug and a small matching parasol with bright silk inlays and a straight handle.

Jane Regny, the leading Parisian sports couturiere, has made a new use of the modern arts influence in her sports costumes. She has adapted exaggerated flower motifs from designs made by her husband, who is a well-known artist. The material used is light beige jersey, with dark beige toile de soie forming a thistle plant which supports the flower on the left shoulder.

"There is a vogue nowadays for smartness and for being well dressed," says Hazel Rawson Cades, the beauty expert. Not so much emphasis is being placed on natural prettiness as on good grooming, and we think a great deal of the skill with which clothes are chosen and the knack with which they are worn."

Black Satin With White

Fur; Satin, Crepe Lined

Black satin with white fur and with white satin or crepe for lining and facing is an exceedingly fashionable conception in coats. In this style, the fine tucking in graceful lines is much used, and white fox, sheared caracul and rabbit are the popular furs for trimming. A scarf of the satin lined with white crepe is shown on a stylish black satin coat, and the most chic model that has appeared this season is a coat of black satin made without tucking or other trimming, with a shawl collar and cuffs of heavy white kasha. White coats will be worn later for both sports and more elaborate dress—in mohair, cheviot, angora and all of the fancy weaves in wool.

Gray Is Fashionable

"Gray is the most satisfactory color for travel clothes," says an important designer, who proceeds to prove his point by showing a collection of suits, frocks and coats for travel, each one developed in gray or grayish mixtures. They are strikingly effective and one does not need to be told that they will be quite impervious to dust and travel stains.

AMUSEMENTS

It's a long cry from such plays as "Ben Hur" and "Scaramouche" to Ramon Novarro's latest characterization. One is the type of the mighty drama in which physical action rules—the other no less mighty—but based on mental rather than physical forces.

This is "Lovers" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sensational new story of modern Spain—a vivid drama in which the villain is an army—an army of the whispering tongues of slander.

Novarro plays a young play-wright, innocently involved, thru slander he is unable to trace or combat, in a scandal with the wife of his best friend.

It is a dramatic situation as powerful as tho it required armies to portray on the screen; it is one of the most sensational dramas of today.

The star's characterization is remarkable. As the young artist, coping against the enormous odds of the unseen enemy, he rises to the heights of acting genius. The duel scene, the only physical clash in the remarkable play, is superbly done. Novarro is a magnificent swordsman, as is John Miljan, and the scene will long rank as among the greatest duels of the screen.

Alice Terry plays the heroine. Her beauty is secondary to a wonderful gift of acting, and the difficult role of the slandered wife is a new triumph for the heroine of "Marc Nostrum" and "The Magician."

John M. Stahl directed the new production, staged on an elaborate scale at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. The cast includes Edward Martindel, Edward Connelly, George K. Arthur, Lillian Leighton, Otto Hoffman and others of note.

It is an adaptation of "The World and His Wife," the famous stage play by Charles F. Nirdlinger, and one of the dramatic sensations of the European stage.

Gayly Ornamented
Shoes for Summer

Brocade, Straw, Kid, Novelty Leathers Are Used
in New Models.

An extravagant style in shoes for the summer is the embroidered slipper for evening, and gay shoes of different sorts are shown for the country. Dress shoes are elaborate. A unique model is made of rich brocade, with a vamp jeweled embroidery. In this very ornate style of shoe the needlework pattern takes the place of a buckle, but heels continue to be conspicuous, studded with stones, painted, inlaid and enameled. This detail alone makes the new evening shoes exceedingly costly.

Straw shoes and straw embroidery are the latest fancy in footwear for the country and the beach. These are brightly colored and are made in one of the sandal shapes, pumps or colonials. The needlework patterns are suggestive of both the peasant and the American Indian embroidery. This is done in straw which resembles the crocheted sports hats, on kid and even no linen, with which linen flowers are shown for the coat lapel.

Footwear is of more than passing interest this season. In shoes of all types there is a tendency to elaboration such as has not been accepted by well-dressed women since the days of ornate historic shoes. Apparently the boot is extinct.

In the better shoes a much finer quality is shown and in the greater number two leathers are used. Snake, lizard and even shark are made into the smartest models, almost always in combination with plain kid. As summer weather arrives fewer black shoes are shown, and almost none of the violent colors that were worn a

Lizard Skin, Gray Kid Trimming;
Pale-Blue Opalescent Kid.

few seasons ago are seen. In their stead are the natural grays and gentle shades of the skins, and in plain kids, pretty tans, beige, brown and taupe.

Gray in the light pearly shades is shown by bootmakers who cater to a fashionable clientele, and the most elegant shoes for afternoon and evening dress are sandals with Louis Quinze heel and one strap, made of plain leather or kid in delicate tones of the new blues, rose and all of the latest colors and in light and pastel shades. Kid is considered correct for the better shoes and comparatively little patent leather is shown except in combination with kid.

Ruffles Are Playing
Part in New Fashions

The use of ruffles is noticed on many of the dresses in the current Paris collections this spring. Skirts with many ruffles in front and straight backs are frequently seen. Taffeta afternoon dresses and georgette or chiffon evening frocks quite often take this way of inserting the necessary fullness while retaining the smart straight silhouette.

Cyber presents a dainty evening
model of cool green georgette crepe in this style ornamented with a strip of strass embroidery. A darker green inset at the neck gives a pleasant effect.

Hand-Plaited Frocks
Among Dress Features

In the golden nineties women feared coming untied. Now they fear coming uncreased. For the plaits put in solely by hand are outstanding features of many of the spring frocks.
Many of these dresses have no other trimming than the series of tiny plaits. The latter are so employed that they form stripes, checks, chevrons and even cubist designs. In other cases they are used to simulate a yoke, a bodice or even a belt.

Watch Your Woolens!

With the summer season, the moth miller is abroad hunting a good place to lay her eggs. She prefers woolens as a good place to deposit her eggs, for there will be good feeding for her young.

Keep the cover on your upholstered furniture, brushed at least

40 COUNTRIES IN BIG FARM CENSUS

Great Undertaking to Be Started in 1930.

Washington.—Forty countries of Europe, Asia and Africa are ready to co-operate with the United States in the colossal world census of agriculture, to be taken in Rome in 1930.

Leon M. Estabrook, United States agricultural commissioner, now on a tour of Mexico, western South America, the Dutch East Indies, and eastern and southern Asia, has been actively engaged in promoting the census since June, 1926.

The census will be the first effort ever made to inventory world agriculture. It follows the dream of David Lubin, founder of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome. Lubin was convinced the institute should not only serve as a clearing house for such statistics as might be supplied by adhering governments, but should take the lead in promoting better and more dependable information throughout the world.

As director of the world census, Estabrook has found that of 200 countries only 60 ever have taken an inventory of agriculture. Fewer than 40 of these have taken a census since 1900. In the last six years only four or five countries have taken censuses in the same year.

As a consequence no satisfactory comparable figures on international agricultural conditions are available. It is the object of the world census to make such figures available and to obtain statistics which will have a common meaning in all countries.

The census will take account of size of farms, kinds of farms according to well-recognized categories, area of arable or cultivated land, area allotted to each crop, and the production of each crop for the period covered by the census; also the number of livestock of each kind on each farm by age and sex.

The work of the census will be done in the assembly room of the international institute, a palatial structure erected by King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, from his private funds, and presented to agricultural interests of the world.

Tom Ballotti and Little Mike

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

A QUEER story, that of the stocky Tom Ballotti, who worked his hands raw and his face gaunt for the sake of a friend. Queer, because of the speech he made and the interpretations that followed. Did he mean just what he said, or was he shaking off praise in an attempt at modesty? Was he showing his feelings or hiding them? They still argue the question up in Mother Lode, though Tom had wandered away to other fields.

At the time of the story Tom was a rock miner. His name was not Tom or Ballotti, but that was as near as men could make it out. He ran it all together—"Tawbulotti"—and Tom Ballotti it became. One of the hundreds of miners working in the big mines, he walked up the trail at shift times, rode down the skips, and emerged gray with slime. No different from the rest. He had his enemies and his friends and one of the latter was Mike, Little Mike for distinction.

One day the whistle near the collar of the mine blew and as it was not time for the change of shifts, all in the little city dropped work and turned their heads toward the gallows and frame structures on the hill. In a body the town went to the mine and there discovered tragedy. There was no time to be lost, a tunnel had caved in. The only question was: "How many?" and the answer was, "eleven."

Everything stopped while the efforts of men were directed to releasing the eleven men from a prison of rock. Word came up there was danger in the job and no one would be ordered to the task. Who would volunteer? The son of the superintendent pulled off his coat, and was first in the skip. Tom Ballotti was second. There was a cheer when the car was filled and there was disappointment from the scores who were willing but who must wait.

From the first Tom Ballotti clung to his place in the crew. He made it known he would fight for the opportunity and was so determined there was no one who dared try to take his place.

"It is his friend down there, Little Mike," they said. "Tom is working to save his friend."

The crews worked in six-hour shifts and Tom took two out of each four. His short body and strong back were built for this sort of work in which men must crouch while they labor and strain. Tom shoved the rock and muck into the wheelbarrow after the smoke of each charge had blown away. He was the first to the nose of the tunnel to see what progress had been made. He would be the first to break through, if the rescue came on his shift. They all worked hard but none could do the work of Tom.

To the surface he came, plastered with grime, with a face of dead gray through which burned his agonized eyes. The man was suffering, physically and emotionally. His friend was below, his bones and his muscles were aching and his arms and back were bleeding. Tom slept six hours, worked six more, and kept at it, until the blast gave forth a new and hollow sound and a rush of air signaled that the wall was pierced.

Tom Ballotti was the first one through. The rest crowded after. "They are alive," he said, and he patted Little Mike gently. Then came the painful, terrible delay while the tortuous passage was made wide enough to accommodate the stretchers. The weakened men were given stimulants and then shoved back over the rock to the shaft. When they reached the surface, ghosts of men smiling weakly, there was a mighty cheer.

Men praised the rescuers and most of all Tom Ballotti. He tried to escape but they seized him.

"Fine, Tom," they said. "He worked double shift to save his friend."
"And Little Mike," Tom said, "How is he now?"

"See for yourself. He is eating; see him! He is smiling again."
"Little Mike," said Tom Ballotti, stopping before the rescued miner and speaking that all might hear: "You owe me $18. You have owed it to me for three months. When are you going to pay?"

There was a gasp, an incredulous gasp. Could it be Tom Ballotti has been thinking of his money? What a thing to say!

"He is no friend at all, that Tom Ballotti, thinking of his $18."

And they let him walk away alone. He has gone now, to the placer fields where there is no rock to cave in. There are some who tell his story to show how selfish a man may be. Once in a while some one puts forth the theory that Tom didn't mean it at all; that he was embarrassed and had sought to escape their praise. That is the story and the argument. A queer fellow, Tom Ballotti.

Pure Air for President

President Coolidge has an "air purifier" on his desk at the White House. The instrument consists of a tall amber-colored glass jar with a dome-shaped glass top. Inside this jar are little cubes of a camphor preparation which resemble lumps of sugar. Between callers the President lifts the lid for a few seconds. A strong trace of camphor quickly permeates the air, stifling other odors and "purifying the air."

OLDEST ESTABLISHED WOMEN ACTIVE IN ITALY'S FASCISTI

Trucking Business In Circleville, Weffer Brothers, Lancaster Pike, Has Been In Family Name Seventy Odd Years.

Some seventy-odd years ago, Frederick Weffer, father of late Christian Weffer, established a trucking business on the Lancaster pike in this city; following his death his son, Christian Weffer, succeeded to the business which he successfully conducted for a number of years, transferring the business to his sons, William and George Weffer who since that time have conducted it under the name of Weffer Bros.

In the good old days when the business was established and for a number of years thereafter, the work on the truck patch was done similar to the methods employed now depending strictly on weather conditions, now under the more progressive methods employed, the weather as far as rainfall is concerned, can go hang, as a large portion of the patch is under the March Irrigation System, which after the water is turned on works automatically. The firm stake up and amputate the suckers from their tomato vines which is a saving of at least one-third of the crop as compared to the old-fashioned method of letting the vines run wild on the ground.

This enterprising firm have under cultivation at present 7,000 tomato vines, 10,000 cabbages, 5 acres of beets, 4 acres of spinach, 1 acre of onions and 5 acres of sweet-corn and a large number of their justly celebrated tip-top canteloupes. The firm is assisted in the conduct of the business by Frederick Weffer, the second, a son of the senior member of the firm, Mr. William Weffer.

The firm is a member of the Pickaway County Vegetable Growers' Association of the Farm Bureau, the members of the firm are genial, wholesome gentlemen of Swiss extraction and are deserving of the continued success they have enjoyed.

Thousands Being Trained for Productive Work.

Rome.—Woman's place is in the home, but not necessarily her own home, according to woman Fascist organizations which are training several hundred thousand girls and women for productive occupations closely connected with domesticity.

Signora Eliza Majer Rizzoli, head of the feminine Fascists, said the nation's crying need for nurses would have been satisfied within a few years. Five thousand trained nurses have been graduated in special courses, and 35,000 more are being trained. More than a hundred thousand women are being instructed as scientific farmers with the intention of relieving men of such work as animal breeding, truck gardening, fruit farming and horticulture of all types.

Premier Mussolini, believing "a mother's kitchen budget to be the cornerstone of healthy national economy," has instructed women to carry out propaganda in favor of home rather than imported products. The organized groups train each member as a lecturer, and provide her with data that even casual conversations prove of propagandistic utility. Feminine Fascists advise producers of the necessity of changes and improvements.

The most far-reaching of the six roles assigned to women by Il Duce—the others being propagandistic, sanitary, agricultural, scholastic and protection of home products—is "moral tutelage of labor," which means that social work among laboring classes of both sexes is their duty.

Despite the fact that a principle of Fascism is to keep women out of political activity, it is pointed out that they have equal rights in "politics" of the new national labor unions.

In several unions women have commanding positions. Some say that women will be permitted to be deputies when the present chamber of deputies, conforming with Mussolini's plan, is transformed into a "chamber of labor" representing the productive population of Italy by trades and professions instead of by geographical regions.

Developing Palestine

Although economic conditions in Palestine are still primitive, modern methods are making headway, and there are good prospects of development and progress. The country is generally fertile, and cereals, grapes, olives and various fruits are produced, while sheep and goats thrive in the lowlands, and in the mountains in time of drought.

It is the talent of human nature to run from one extreme to another.—Jonathan Swift.

The theories a man gets in his head are apt to cause a lot of trouble when they are exploded.

The nightingale is no more interesting than the midnight cat to the man who wants to sleep.

Put Chivalry Before

Desire of His Heart

As a wooer Sir Thomas More seems to have been more philosophic than ardent. He made the acquaintance of a gentleman who had three daughters and the second of these he says he deemed "the fairest and best favored," but restrained his passion for her because he "considered that it would be both grief and shame to the eldest to see her younger sister preferred before her in marriage."

Accordingly "of a certain pity" he "framed his fancy toward" the eldest daughter and married her in 1505. The union was harmonious, but she died after six years and he married a widow. She, however, lacked the one desirable faculty in a wife—the ability to appreciate her husband's jests. But if Erasmus is truthful, More philosophically made her defect a means of controlling her garrulity. Whenever her wagging tongue threatened his peace of mind he would tell her a joke the point of which he was sure would puzzle her, and thus the author of Utopia was left alone with his literary labors, and, presumably, to prepare a fresh supply of humorous ammunition.—Kansas City Star.

Charleston in Ireland

The Charleston has been included in the annual dancing tournament between cities of Ulster, Ireland. It is not classed as one of the regular dances, such as the fox trot, waltz and tango, but is given a special and separate competition. The tournament this year was conducted in Victoria hall, Belfast, by the Ulster Amateur Dancing championship, and every amateur dancer in Ulster was eligible. The first prize was a loving cup presented by the lord mayor of Belfast when the contest was inaugurated three years ago. Miss Katherine Watson of Derry judged the trials, and admitted that Belfast had better dancers than Derry.

Clean by Electricity

The uses of electric cleaners are many, especially those which can be reversed to blow as well as inhale. One was rushed into a coal mine at Bicknell, Ind., in 1923 to pump air to miners imprisoned by rock falls after an explosion. A householder used one last winter to blow warm air down between his house walls to thaw out a frozen water pipe. Another effectually defeated beetles whose larvae, previously uncapturable, damaged the rafters of an English castle. An American farmer uses one regularly each summer to separate leaves from berries that have been picked and spread out on a sheet.

Jungle Youth Resilient

Youth also flames in darkest Africa. The Presbyterian board of foreign missions reports that evangelistic work in West Africa is becoming increasingly difficult. In the old days the boys and girls stayed at home and obeyed the tribal laws. Now they go chasing off to other tribes while still in their teens, and the dusky elders do not know how to handle them. Apparently this "revolt of youth" is going on in the jungle as well as in the United States.—Capper's Weekly.

CITY COUNCIL IN SESSION JULY SIXTH

Fines and Licenses to the Amount of $777.10 Collected by Mayor in June.

The city council met in regular session Wednesday evening, July 6, with President John C. Goeller, presiding, and the following members present; Baker, Landenberger, Leist, Marion and Wolf. Mayor Fitzpatrick reported fines, licenses and fees collected during the month of June in the sum of $777.10 and on motion of Mr. Wolf this report was received and placed on file.

Mr. Baker offered a motion which carried that the trustees of the Lutheran church be granted permission to use the alley next to their premises for the storage of materials during the construction of the new building.

Amos Wilkerson requested permission to construct a curb along the line of his lot at the corner of Pickaway and Union streets and this was referred to the service committee.

Barton Walters, on behalf of the Norfolk and Western Railway company, requested council to pass the ordinance granting said company permission to construct a side track on Huston street.

An ordinance determining to proceed to improve Pickaway street by constructing an extension to the Pickaway street storm water sewer, with a branch or lateral on Mill street, was introduced and read for the first time.

An ordinance determining to proceed to improve Pickaway, Ohio, Washington and Clinton streets and Half avenue, by constructing an extension to the Huston street storm water sewer, was introduced and read for the first time.

An ordinance granting permission to the Norfolk and Western Railway company the right to construct and maintain a switch or side track over Canal and Ohio streets was read for the second time.

An ordinance entitled an ordinance granting permission to Norfolk and Western Railway company to lay down, operate and maintain a railroad track in Huston street was read for the second time.

Mayor Fitzpatrick stated that several citizens living on Fairview avenue had asked for street lights. Mr. Baker stated that lights had been asked for on East Ohio street and Weldon avenue, and also that a petition had been presented asking for a light on Court street at the intersection of Folsom avenue. President Goeller referred these petitions to the service committee.

Solicitor Weldon asked council to decide upon the dates for the expiration and payment of the bonds to be issued to pay for the construction of the storm water sewers on Pickaway and Ohio streets. Mr. Baker offered a motion which was seconded that this request be referred to the finance committee, the city solicitor, auditor and clerk of council and this was adopted.

A communication from the Chesapeake and Hocking Railway company accepting the amendment to ordinance No. 566 providing the contract terms and conditions for the crossing of Mill, Main and Mound streets and consenting that the bond heretofore given by said railway company shall apply to said ordinance as amended, was received and placed on record.

JAPAN CHANGES LIKE A WEATHERVANE

JOINS THE UNITED STATES COMES BACK TO FIRST LOVE

Deserts England and Joins America For Cruiser Limit—Insists That World's Interests Are Best Served By Adhering To the Proposals of the United States At Geneva—Dramatic Move Disconcerts Old John Bull.

Suddenly intervening in the Anglo-American difficulty over cruiser tonnage at Geneva, Japan Wednesday night not only supported the American contention for a low limitation, but insisted that world interests would best be served by adhering to the original minimum figures of the United States of 250,000 tons.

Even British self control was shaken by this unexpected wholehearted advocacy of the American position, which was made at an informal meeting.

British plenipotentiaries seemed stunned for a moment; then W. C. Bridgeman, first lord of the admiralty, is understood to have declared: "These figures are impossible as a basis of discussion."

This development has in a dramatic way given a new angle to the tripartite naval conference, and means that Great Britain now must convince Japan and the United States that a high cruiser tonnage—upward of 600,000 tons—is justifiable.

It may mean increasing chances of failure of the conference for any treaty at Geneva must have Great Britain's approval, and the British are understood to be determined to maintain powerful cruiser fleets.

Altho Admiral Saito suggested certain modifications of the projected treaty to meet special Japanese needs it was thought that none of these requests would present difficulties for solution.

If a faithful account of the Geneva negotiations ever is written, some observers feel that it will reveal to the world that a great Anglo-American treaty has been enacted.

The thread of the play, judging from reliable accounts, is this—that Great Britain, which has held the mastery of the seas for centuries, intends to maintain this mastery and can see neither justice nor wisdom of a youthful nation across the seas, the United States, wishing to lay down fleets equaling those of Great Britain.

Great Britain contends that a high cruiser strength is essential and vital to the needs of her country, especially to give assurance that Great Britain shall not starve because of the cutting off of food supplies at distant points.

The United States apparently gives recognition to Britain's peculiar economic position, but insists that America, like Britain, must maintain communications with the outlying points of the earth for those broad economic reasons connected with the position of the United States as a great world power.

Wednesday's private meetings between the American and British delegates proved disappointing, because the British, it is understood, expressed complete dissatisfaction with the new American suggestion for a maximum cruiser tonnage of 400,000 tons.

It was even reported on good authority that there was talk during the lively conversation as to who would be responsible before world opinion if the conference should collapse and that the British delegates more than hinted that responsibility would fall on the shoulders of the United States.

The British maintained that some fault lies with the Americans because they failed to perceive what the British regard as the wisdom of cutting down the sizes of individual warships.

The American delegates insisted that the United States cannot be expected to build warcraft poorly suited to American national needs, and pointed out the immensity of the building program which would be involved for the United States in accepting the British program of approximately 600,000 tons in cruisers.

The situation, from the American standpoint, was that the American delegation either would have to subscribe to a treaty which would give Great Britain about double the cruiser strength of the United States, or to a treaty which would establish parity on the basis of 600,000 tons.

Apparently the American delegates believed that neither solution would be approved by the American people.

THE LIBRARY QUESTION IS NOT SETTLED

Board of Control May Furnish Money, or the Hat May be Passed on Outside.

A possibility of a deficiency appropriation by the controlling board to care for the expense of the state library board adjourned without taking definite action until the opinion of the attorney general is obtained.

Governor Donahey made recommendations to the board for placing the books in college libraries and transferring its functions to them. Representatives from these colleges were present at the meeting Wednesday and said their own libraries offer problems that are difficult to meet.

Most of them declare their libraries are crowded and have outgrown the quarters assigned to them, but offered any assistance they might be able to give.

The governor vetoed the appropriation because there was not enough revenue to meet all needs, he declared, and said he believed the functions of the state library could be carried on by the college administrations in a more efficient manner.

Representatives from numerous clubs were present and voiced their disapproval of any plan to distribute the library. They declared it impossible to move the books and functions to college libraries without an additional expense that would equal the amount of the appropriation.

C. A. Dyer, legislative agent of the Ohio Farm bureau federation and the Ohio State grange, told the board that in event the deficiency appropriation could not be made, and if the board would agree not to distribute the library, he stood ready to bring the forces he represents to work on a proposition that will provide money from outside to keep the library in operation.

He declared he had information that shows a great number of clubs and civic organizations will provide money to operate the library on a small scale at least. He was not prepared to state, he said, whether the amount of the original appropriation would be obtained.

Under the governor's plan the traveling library section of the State library would be divided among the four state normal colleges at Bowling Green, Kent, Athens and Oxford, each to serve its section of the state.

The archaeological and historical books would be transferred to the library of the Archaeological and Historical society in Columbus, and the remainder of the books, including the legislative reference work, would go to Ohio State university.

It was expected that definite action will be taken by the board at its next meeting, July 13.

One-Horned Rhinoceros Is Found in Java Jungle

Berlin.—A scaly monster of the pre-human ages of the earth, surviving into modern times on the swampy fastnesses of southern Java, is reported to the scientific journal, Die Umschau, by Dr. P. Vageler.

It is described as a one-horned rhinoceros, related to a form already known elsewhere in the East Indies, but differing from it in that its hide is closely covered with small, horny scales. It also has enormous front teeth, like those of the hippopotamus. It has often been described by the natives under the name "Tanggiling," which means "scaly beast," but Europeans were incredulous. Finally photographs were brought out of the jungle showing the animal.

ONE DOG, NO DONKEY

Whitten's Uncle Tom's Cabin show out of Texas, passed through the city this morning enroute to Laurelville, for a week's stand during the black-berry harvest; the company travels by Ford motor trucks. Uncle Tom, Marks, Little Eva and the other celebrities composing the characters of Harriet Beecher Stowe's famous novel, were not in evidence, neither was the proverbial donkey of Marks the Lawyer, and only one bloody looking hound, of the pack that chased the wife of George Harris and babe across the ice on the Ohio river, on her way to Canada and freedom, was in evidence.

Build House for Comfort

Rambling rooms may be romantic to look upon, but the romance caused by inconvenience and lack of comfort soon fades. Not only should a house be big enough and not too big, but its rooms need to be related to each other so as to save steps and lessen labor.

Brilliant Gem

A stone which has a color dispersion even greater than that of the diamond is olivine, or demantoid. A bright green variety comes to us from west of the Ural mountains. Olivine has a brilliant luster, but it is rather soft.

Trade

Trade increases the wealth and glory of a nation.—Earl of Chatham.

Long Forgotten Isles

Somebody in Whitehall has discovered that at least one group of the British Isles has not yet been surveyed and officially mapped, and a government expedition is being sent to St. Kilda to do the job. Forty-three persons, sharing five surnames among them, dwell on the main island of the group, which is about 100 miles west of the mainland of Scotland.

Ice "Sinks" Airplane

The great obstacle in the way of trans-Atlantic flight by airplane is ice, the same element that bothers the seamen. It is not that the icebergs get in the way, but when flying through a cold mist the ice forms quickly on the wings and by filling in the curvatures changes the contours. This will sometimes "sink" an airplane in eight minutes.

Canary on the Wire

Among the patrons of a telegraph company in Kansas City, Mo., one day was a negro woman. "You folk send flowers by telegram, don't you?" she asked. "Yes," "Well, I want you all to send this here canary to Van Buren, Ark.," she said, lifting a caged canary to the counter.

Some time ago William Notacker found robins building a nest in a mop on his back porch at Chicago. Mrs. Notacker got another mop and left the home-building songsters undisturbed. "Now there are six more robins in the world."

The Easier Way

"So Maud chose to marry rather than become a stenographer." "Yes; Maud's kinda lazy. She felt she could run a husband without much trouble, whereas to run a typewriter she'd have to take lessons."

REAL SPEED

Pat, employed in a local quarry, one day dropped a stick of dynamite and forthwith disappeared into the clouds with several tons of debris. The catastrophe was witnessed by Mike, who, somewhat later was approached by the quarry owner.

"Where's Pat?" asked the latter. "Gone," replied Mike. "And when will he be back?" "Well," said Mike, "if he comes back as fast as he went—head, he'll be back yesterday!"

Rather Clumsy

GERMAN PLANES

Were So Few That Aces Had To Double Up.

So scantily equipped were the German air forces at the beginning of the World War that even such aces as Baron Manfred von Richthofen were forced to take turns at flying the few available one-seater planes, points out Floyd Gibbons, the noted war correspondent, in an article in this week's Liberty. After much preliminary flying in two-seaters which, the author explains, von Richthofen thoroughly disliked, he was finally assigned to a single-seater Fokker.

"But air equipment was not plentiful," the writer continues, "and he had to share the new machine with a fellow pilot, who was equally ambitious to get away from two-seaters and cruise as an individual flying unit. The joint ownership of the new plane was unsatisfactory to both Richthofen and his comrade. Each feared that the other one would smash the plane. One flew it in the morning and the other flew it in the afternoon."

"Richthofen made his first trip without encountering an enemy plane. His comrade flew it that afternoon and that was the last Richthofen ever saw of it. But he became the sole owner of the next single-seater issued to the squadron."

Nature's Laws Unbroken

Two things found lately in reading I thought rather good: There is no such thing as "breaking nature's laws." We disregard the laws, and nature breaks us. . . . No one is so foolish as the man with good mind, who will not think.—E. W. Howe's Monthly.

Mythological Satyr

In Greek mythology the satyr was a race of woodland deities who roamed the hills in the time of Bacchus, whom the Greeks also called Dionysius. They are represented with long ears, flat noses, a man's body and the legs and hoofs of a goat.

In France Good Friday is called Passion Friday and in Germany it is commonly known as Still Friday.

Milestones In The Canning Industry

THE invention of a means of preserving foods was made not with the idea of benefitting housewives, but to save soldiers and sailors from scurvy, caused by lack of vegetables and fruits in the diet. It was made in France in 1809 when Napoleon offered a prize for such an invention. This prize was won by Nicholas Appert, and marks the first milestone in an industry that has developed into an invaluable asset in housekeeping.

It was war again, the Civil War in America, that stimulated inventions to meet the need for more canned foods. After many experiments a way was found to increase the temperature of boiling water so that food could be processed more quickly. Because of the increased output during the war, the availability of foods in tins became more generally known, but as much of the work of preserving them had to be done by hand, they were too dear for the average household. However, in 1876, an inventor named Howe discovered a means of closing cans by machinery, thus diminishing the cost, and bringing the industry to another important milestone in its progress.

The hole-and-cap, or solder cans, were still used however, though with many minor improvements, until about 1907, when the "sanitary can," the climax of a series of inventions, was put on the market. This can is closed by machinery which forms interlocking seams, crimping the edges together. The perfecting of a golden enamel lining which preserves better the color of certain foods, red fruits in particular, is the latest milestone reached by the canning industry.

In 1913 the whole business of canning was put on a strictly scientific basis by the establishment of a scientific bureau by the National Canners' Association, a step which has given to all the world a sense of complete security and satisfaction in the use of canned foods. War for the third time, the World War, gave a great impetus to the consumption of canned foods when our soldiers needed healthful diet here and abroad.

Liberal allowance for your old cleaner

You won't have to postpone owning a Greater Hoover until your old, inefficient cleaner is completely useless. You can know the joy of Hoover cleaning immediately. You can have the aid of the Hoover all through these summer months, when the daily burden of blown-in dust is so great and Hoover helpfulness means so much.

Just call us on the phone. We'll make an appraisal of your old machine—without the slightest charge or obligation—and give you a generous allowance for it on the purchase of your new Hoover.

Just think what a difference having the Hoover is going to make in your enjoyment of the summer! Think of the extra time you'll have for rest—the extra vitality you'll have for play—if the Hoover is relieving you of the burden of cleaning—and doing it better than it's ever been done before.

"Positive Agitation," the revolutionary cleaning principle of the Greater Hoover, sets a new standard of home cleanliness. If you don't know the untold difference which this amazing principle makes in cleaning, you owe it to yourself to have a Hoover demonstration. Only $6.25 down, balance monthly, if you wish to purchase.

CIRCLEVILLE LODGE

No. 77, B. P. O. Elks, Fed a Multitude With Cat Fish and Trimmings.

Tuesday evening Circleville Lodge No. 77, B. P. O. Elks, served nearly three hundred members and visiting brothers to an excellently prepared fish dinner prepared by brother Jim "High-pockets" Watts, of Chillicothe Lodge, who is a past grand master in cooking fish and oysters, and admirably served under the supervision of the House Committee and Trustees, etc.

Following the dinner the members proceeded to the lodge room where Exalted Ruler Stephen R. Washburn and his corps of officers initiated a class of six candidates, all good men, "tried and true," viz: Sheriff Frank Davis, and his deputy, John G. Ward Jr., John Goodchild, of this city; Ed. Geddes, of Harrisburg; Carson Dresbach, of Kingston and George Wertman, of Washington township.

Lesson for July 10

SAMUEL'S FAREWELL

LESSON TEXT—1 Samuel, Chap. 12.
GOLDEN TEXT—Thy loving kindness is before mine eyes and I have walked in Thy truth.
PRIMARY TOPIC—Samuel the Faithful Servant.
JUNIOR TOPIC—An Old Man's Advice.
INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Make a Clean Record.
YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Righteousness in Public Life.

Samuel means "asked of God." God gave him in answer to his mother's prayer. She promised to give him back to God. In his early childhood his mother cared for and taught him. At an early age she handed him over to the care of Eli to minister unto the Lord in the Tabernacle. While he was thus engaged God called him. He responded to this call and spent a long life in useful service to God and his nation as judge and prophet. Our lesson today is his farewell address.

I. Samuel's Challenge to the People (vv. 1-5).

1. Reminder of the way the king had been given (v. 1).

He showed that they were directly responsible for the change in government. Though keenly feeling the reflection upon himself, and their ingratitude to God in their demand for a king, he had not resisted their wish.

2. Review of his own administration (vv. 2, 3).

(1) Walk from childhood (v. 2). Samuel's was a remarkable life; from childhood to old age he had lived an upright and pure life. (2) Career as judge and ruler (v. 3). He boldly challenged them to show where and how he had even in the smallest matters defrauded or oppressed anyone.

3. The vote of confidence by the people (vv. 4, 5).

It was Samuel's right as he laid down the reins of government to have his record vindicated and to have his integrity established beyond a doubt, so that no evil-minded man could ever be able to cast reproach upon him.

II. Samuel Reviews God's Dealing From the Time of Moses (vv. 6-15).

He reasoned with them concerning the good hand of the Lord upon them from the time of Moses. Though they with ingratitude turned from the Lord and demanded a king like the other nations, He had acceded to their request and set a king over them.

1. National prosperity conditioned by obedience (v. 14).

Though they had displeased God in choosing a king, if they would fear the Lord and render obedience, national prosperity would still be given. Would that the nations today could see that obedience to God is the only way to prosperity! Nations should find out God's will and then bring themselves into harmony therewith. God's law must be obeyed by the rulers as well as the subjects.

2. Disobedience to God meant the nation's ruin (v. 15).

It is folly to ask God's blessing upon a nation while it is living in rebellion against Him. True statesmanship is to find out God's will concerning the nation and so direct that in all its laws and customs there may be harmony with that will.

III. Samuel's Own Vindication (vv. 16-19).

This was such a critical hour in the history of the nation that Samuel sought to indelibly impress its meaning on their hearts. This he did by means of the thunder and rain out of season. Harvest time was not the season for thunder and rain, so when it came at the call of Samuel the people were affrighted. They saw it as an example of God's mighty power which, if directed against them, would destroy them in an instant.

IV. Samuel's Gracious Response (vv. 20-25).

1. "Fear not—serve the Lord with all your heart" (vv. 20-22).

Samuel did not minimize their sin, but assured them that if they would serve the Lord wholeheartedly He would not forsake them. The ground of their hope was in the faithfulness of God in keeping His covenant, "For His name's sake" shows that God's honor is at stake.

"God forbid that I should sin against the Lord in ceasing to pray for you" (v. 23). Though the people had rejected Samuel, yet he had such magnanimity of soul that he has not allowed their ingratitude to stop his intercession for them. Such failure he regarded as sin for himself. He assured them that in spite of their sin their one concern should be to fear the Lord and serve Him wholeheartedly.

Be Ready to Act

Doors are opening or closing all the time in life, and what they will do for you depends on the way you grasp or fail to grasp the opportunities that come to you. Be watchful; be ready to act.—Maltbie D. Babcock.

Influence depends less on our activities than on the qualities that lie behind our activities, as the planet attracts, not by its motion, but by its weight.—Thomas Starr King.

EAGLES LOST TWO GAMES

To the Newark Team Sunday Afternoon Being Shutout In Both Games.

The Circleville Eagle team lost both ends of the double header played Sunday against the Newark Orange Crushes, being shut-out in each contest while the visitors were collecting ten runs in the first fray and one in the closer.

Smith, the Newark pitcher, did a nifty iron man stunt, pitching both games, each seven innings, and allowing the Roundtowners only one safe blow in each contest. In the first game Terry secured a scratch hit off the third baseman's glove and in the other contest Bill Donahue drove out a nice double to left center.

George Kanavel was on the mound in the first contest and in addition to being touched up for several safe hits was overly liberal with free passes to first, issuing seven bases on balls and hitting one batter. In addition he was given very sloppy support. In the second game Smith and Plank both pitched masterly ball, but a bad break gave the visitors a one run edge that was not overcome, although Circleville had two scoring chances in the fourth when Thompson tried to steal third with two out and was caught and in the sixth when Terry reached third on a walk and a wild throw trying to catch him at second, but was caught at the plate when Miller grounded to the third baseman.

On next Sunday the Eagles play at West Jefferson.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHN HIMROD.

George Himrod received a telegram this morning from Wauchula, Florida, apprising him of the death last night of his brother, John. Deceased had been in failing health for over a year and recently underwent an operation in the Jacksonville hospital, being removed to his home over a week ago. He and his family visited his sister, Mrs. E. S. Stephens, and brothers, George and Ralph, in this city last summer enroute to Florida from Colorado, where he had been for his health. Deceased was a son of Edward and Lucretia (Koch) Himrod, and was 46 years of age. Besides his wife and son, he is survived by his mother, who is visiting her daughter and sons in this city, two other sisters, Mrs. Geo. K. Smith, Mrs. Luther Bostwick, and two other brothers, Charles and Turney, all of Wauchula.

OF LAWYERS
IN COLUMBUS

To Discuss Ways and Means
to Keep State Libaray
Open—May Land in Court.

Protestants against the closing of the state library, which became a fact on the morning of July 1, may carry their objections to the extent of making it a matter of court determination. This plan is under serious consideration. It has progressed so far that a conference of leading attorneys of Columbus was held to discuss the proper course of procedure.

If the question is raised in the courts, it will start in the supreme and probably be thru an application for a writ of mandamus to compel the governor to show cause why he closed the library or asking for an order to compel the state board of control to appropriate money for its continuance, on the ground that an emergency has arisen and it has the authority to meet the public demand for the library's further operation.

The question of whether it would be possible to meet the situation thru action in the courts arose after a prominent local attorney, who was formerly connected with the state administration in prominent way, had called at the library to consult books essential in a matter of litigation.
Finding it closed he was compelled to send away for the books he wanted.
Disappointed and incensed he immediately called a conference of attorneys to see what could be done and the manner in which to proceed.

He announced he was in all serious ness about the matter and would undoubtedly be done.

The feeling of opposition to the closing of the library is growing and sufficient funds would be subscribed by private parties to insure its continuance if Attorney General Turner had not held this would be impossible under the law, much as he would like to see the library continued.

Colorado Beetle Is Most Serious Pest

Add Arsenate of Lead to Regular Bordeaux Spray.

Two pounds of arsenate of lead added to the regular bordeaux spray mixture will control potato bugs effectively. Those who have calcium arsenate and a cotton duster may use these effectively but the man who depends on picking the bug to save his potatoes has a hopeless task.

"The Colorado potato beetle is a serious pest of potatoes," says C. H. Brannon, extension entomologist at the North Carolina State college. "The plants are first attacked by the over-winter beetles and later by the first generation of slugs. If the pest is not poisoned, the plants are soon ruined, leaving the stems which become dry and black. No grower should permit the bugs to damage his crop. Control measures are simple and effective. The best remedy is to use two pounds of arsenate of lead with the bordeaux mixture made with four pounds of bluestone, four pounds of stone lime and 50 gallons of water."

Mr. Brannon states that the arsenate of lead will poison the bugs while the bordeaux will repel flea beetles and leaf hoppers. Paris green will not give as good results as the arsenate of lead as a poison for the beetles.

Several applications of poison will have to be made and the fields should be watched closely to see that the beetles are kept under control.

Good Stand of Alfalfa Kills Canada Thistles

That a good stand of alfalfa will destroy Canada thistle in three years was revealed by a study of eleven successful demonstrations recently made by A. A. Hansen of Purdue university.

The study of the demonstrations which were located in six different counties in Indiana and involved 22 acres of thistles scattered over large areas of farm land, showed that alfalfa will successfully subdue the thistles only where good stands of the legume are secured. Since more than one year is required to do the job, a hardy variety of alfalfa such as the Grimm or Ontario Variegated is essential. Weakening the thistles by fall plowing by thoroughly preparing the seed bed and by cutting with a hoe while the alfalfa is young, is also necessary to enable the legume to get ahead of the thistles.

The frequent cutting, the vigorous spreading alfalfa root system and the heavy shade cast by the legume account for the ability of the alfalfa to subdue the prickly thistles. The method is of no value on sour, wet soils or where conditions are otherwise not suitable to alfalfa growing, and seed inoculation is necessary to secure the type of alfalfa growth necessary to success.

Blighted Chestnut Tree Aids Fence Post Supply

Chestnut trees that are partially or entirely killed by the blight lose their bark in two or three years and then the trunk season-checks and soon depreciates rapidly. For this reason, Prof. J. A. Cope, extension forester at the New York State College of Agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y., says farmers who are cutting their annual supply of fence posts or grape stakes should use chestnut. He says it is better to cut the posts and store them for future use if there is no need or market for them now than to let them stand and waste.

The blight which attacks this tree has covered the natural range of the species in the entire state and, even in Chautauque county which was the last to be hit, signs of its attack may be seen. Professor Cope says, "It is doubtful if a single sound, living tree is still standing in the rest of the state."

As for other uses of chestnut timber, companies erecting communication or power lines need poles, so trees that are large enough may be sold for that purpose. Sound, wormy chestnut logs are in demand also, for the wood is considered an excellent base for high grade veneers.

H. G. STEVENSON, SECRETARY, MAKES EXHAUSTIVE REPORT

Activities of Chamber of Commerce During the Past Year Are Recited—Body Has Taken An Interest In All Things That Were For the Betterment of City And County—Several Matters of Importance Still Pending—Report of Treasurer.

Secretary Harry G. Stevenson in his report to the chamber of commerce Tuesday evening, July 5, said, in part:

"I am sure that after looking over the activities of this chamber for the past year any 'Doubting Thomas' will be convinced that this organization is doing a good work and that it is entitled to the support of each and every citizen of Circleville and Pickaway county."

Under the head of services to business interests, he said that one of the members, The Mid-Box company, appealed for help in locating baled straw for their operation during the winter. The officers drafted a letter to be sent to all chambers of commerce and boards of trade throughout this state, asking them to advise us of names of shippers of baled straw in their communities. The response showed the wonderful spirit of co-operation and several hundred names were given to the company.

In November, the president appointed a committee to call upon the merchants of this city and secure their Christmas trees to be placed on the sidewalks and illuminated during the Christmas season. They reported the sale of 88 trees.

At this same time, it was voted to spend $30 for lighting of the Pumpkin Show streets lights.

About the first of May, the Citizens' Telephone company filed a new rate schedule with the Public Utilities commission of Ohio, asking for an increase in their telephone rates. President Jeffries appointed an investigation committee and a resolution of protest was mailed to the commission. A hearing will be held October 18.

On the subject of cooperation with other bodies, he said, that the Ohio State university had a "Meat Train" in this city and this was sponsored by the Farm Bureau but a committee from this body worked hand-in-hand with their committee and the fact that 1604 persons called at the train is enough evidence to produce to show that their work was well done.

The Farm Bureau asked the county commissioners for help toward paying the salary of a county farm agent. The commissioners asked for an expression from the Rotary club and chamber of commerce. President Jeffries appointed a committee to call upon the commissioners and the request of the Farm Bureau was granted.

In January, the chamber and the Farm Bureau sponsored the Second Annual Farmers institute which was very successful. The sum of $75 was paid by this body toward the expenses.

Our organization assisted the Farm Bureau in the promotion of Livestock day, June 4, and this was declared a success.

This spring the state board of health ordered the gates to Logan Elm park pad-locked on account of the sanitary condition. President Jeffries cooperated with others and the necessary improvements were made and the park was reopened.

In the matter of traffic and transportation, Secretary Stevenson said that this organization approved the application of the Ohio Transit company to operate a bus line between this city and Lancaster, thru Amanda.

The president appointed a committee to appear before the utility commission of Ohio to protest the granting of a license to the Cannon Ball Bus company, to operate a line of buses between Portsmouth and Columbus, thru this city. The license was not granted.

One of the largest shippers of live poultry in this city, and a member of this body, reported that the express service on the evening northbound N. & W. train was not satisfactory. This office secured complaints from the various shippers and laid them before the officials of the Norfolk & Western railway and the service was greatly improved.

Owing to the congested traffic, a committee from this chamber called upon the city officials and asked them to place traffic lights at the main street crossings. Our committee was informed that the city had no funds and the committee called upon the business people and secured sufficient money to purchase and install five traffic lights. In their report, the committee thanked the management of the Ohio Utility company for the many favors and kindnesses shown them.

Direction signs, at the suggestion of the chamber of commerce, have been placed at four cross-roads on the Jackson pike leading to this city on the new state route 104.

During the past winter, the road to Stoutsville became impassible and our president prevailed upon the county commissioners to improve this road. He said that the matter of the pollution of the Scioto river by the city of Columbus, a resolution was sent to the state board of health by the secretary, asking for an investigation and this matter is pending and our committees are working faithfully and hard on the clearing of the waters of the Scioto and city and county officials have been asked to cooperate in the matter of the pollution of streams in this county.

On the subject of legislation, the secretary said that Representative Marion and Senator Chappellear were asked to favor the adoption of Eastern time and also the gasoline tax of an additional one cent a gallon, and they were asked to oppose the bill taking the licensing of busses and trucks out of the hands of the Utilities commission. The first two bills became laws and the other was defeated.

Representative Marion was requested to oppose any change in the law in reference to the publication of the detailed statement of the expenditures of the county commissioners. This bill, however, became a law.

Under the head of education, he stated, that every one who has attended our dinner meetings will agree that much educational work has been done along the lines of the work of public officials and the operations of the various industries of this city. To enumerate the various speakers and their subjects would be too long and too tiresome.

Among the donations and contributions were: the use of our offices to the local Red Cross until July 1 of this year; assisting the American Legion in staging their annual Community Christmas tree; about $30 was collected to help defray the expense of buying 5,000 sticks of candy to be given by Santa Claus upon the occasion of his visit to this city with his reindeer, and to the sufferers in the Mississippi river disaster $10.

On the other side of the picture we see a large United States flag, a gift to the Chamber of Commerce by our president, Thomas F. Jeffries.

The secretary, under the head of honors, mentioned the banquet held in honor of Pickaway county's Master Farmer, John C. Stevenson. This was a wonderful get-together meeting of farmers and business men.

Another case where honor was shown was when the chamber requested the business men to display the National colors when the War Pictures were being shown in this city, under the auspices of the American Legion.

It is a matter of regret that we are unable to give the secretary's report in full, as it was carefully prepared and showed in a most convincing way that the Chamber of Commerce has been very helpful to our city and county; but the best that we could do was to point to some of the high spots in this excellent resume of the activities of this splendid organization.

Treasurer Fred R. Nicholas reported that he had on hand July 1, one year ago $169.08; that dues collected amounted to $1,405, making a total of $1,574.08; expenditures $1,548.65, leaving a balance of $25.43.

Cotton Again in Fashion Picture

Fabric Is Popular in Paris for Sports and Spectator Costumes.

The fact that cottons are regaining their former position in summer fashions is recorded by the Woman's Home Companion, and is good news to the many women who like the crisp look and feel of a cotton dress for hot-weather wear. Paris, after making cotton an outcast from the fabric family for several seasons, has brought it again to the fore, especially for sports wear and spectator costumes. For golf, an English cotton print in a flower and geometric pattern is attracting attention, while pique is very chic for tennis. Summer dresses of printed batiste are boil-proof, tub-proof and sun-proof.

The dress on the left is designed for the older woman, to whom the square neck is always becoming. Groups of tucks at the shoulders and skirt front give just the right amount of fullness. A nice effect has been obtained by the pointed line where waist and skirt join, which suggests a yoke when the dress is belted. There's a small vest portion beneath the front opening and a flower of the dress material for the left shoulder.

The dress on the right, which has the young girl in mind, makes use of the present vogue for bows, placing one at the shoulder and another at the waist, where it emphasizes the unusual waistline treatment.

"Linge de plage," as the French call their beach costumes, may be for either sun or sea. Mary Nowlitzky, who has the facility for combining mediums in an unusual manner, has created a "sun suit" of beige crepe de chine which expresses the present-day freedom of color and line. Over it she poses a sleeveless coat of yellow eponge edged with raffia and inlaid with points of multicolored crepe de chine. To complete the costume there is a rug and a small matching parasol with bright silk inlays and a straight hane.

Jane Regny, the leading Parisian sports couturiere, has made a new use of the modern arts influence in her sports costumes. She has adapted exaggerated flower motifs from designs made by her husband, who is a well-known artist. The material used is light beige jersey, with dark beige toile de sole forming a thistle plant which supports the flower on the left shoulder.

"There is a vogue nowadays for smartness and for being well dressed," says Hazel Rawson Cades, the beauty expert. "Not so much emphasis is being placed on natural prettiness as on good grooming, and we think a great deal of the skill with which clothes are chosen and the knack with which they are worn."

Black Satin With White Fur; Satin, Crepe Lined

Black satin with white fur and white satin or crepe for lining and facing is an exceedingly fashionable conception in coats. In this style, the fine tucking in graceful lines is much used, and white fox, sheared caracul and rabbit are the popular furs for trimming. A scarf of the satin lined with white crepe is shown on a stylish black satin coat, and the most chic model that has appeared this season is a coat of black satin made without tucking or other trimming, with a shawl collar and cuffs of heavy white kasha. White coats will be worn later for both sports and more elaborate dress—in mohair, cheviot, angora and all of the fancy weaves in wool.

Gray Is Fashionable

"Gray is the most satisfactory color for travel clothes," says an important designer, who proceeds to prove his point by showing a collection of suits, frocks and coats for travel, each one developed in gray or grayish mixtures. They are strikingly effective and one does not need to be told that they will be quite impervious to dust and travel stains.

AMUSEMENTS

It's a long cry from such plays as "Ben Hur" and "Screamouche" to Ramon Novarro's latest characterization. One is the type of the mighty drama in which physical action rules—the other no less mighty—but based on mental rather than physical forces.

This is "Lovers" Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's sensational new story of modern Spain—a vivid drama in which the villain is an army—an army of the whispering tongues of slander.

Novarro plays a young play-wright, innocently involved, thru slander he is unable to trace or combat, in a scandal with the wife of his best friend.

It is a dramatic situation as powerful as tho it required armies to portray on the screen; it is one of the most sensational dramas of today.

The star's characterization is remarkable. As the young artist, coping against the enormous odds of the unseen enemy, he rises to the heights of acting genius. The duel scene, the only physical clash in the remarkable play, is superbly done. Novarro is a magnificent swordsman, as is John Miljan, and the scene will long rank as among the greatest duels of the screen.

Alice Terry plays the heroine. Her beauty is secondary to a wonderful gift of acting, and the difficult role of the slandered wife is a new triumph for the heroine of "Marc Nostrum" and "The Magician."

John M. Stahl directed the new production, staged on an elaborate scale at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. The cast includes Edward Martindel, Edward Connelly, George K. Arthur, Lillian Leighton, Otto Hoffman and others of note.

It is an adaptation of "The World and His Wife," the famous stage play by Charles F. Nirdlinger, and one of the dramatic sensations of the European stage.

Gayly Ornamented
Shoes for SummerBrocade, Straw, Kid, Novelty Leathers Are Used
in New Models.

An extravagant style in shoes for the summer is the embroidered slipper for evening, and gay shoes of different sorts are shown for the country. Dress shoes are elaborate. A unique model is made of rich brocade, with a vamp jeweled embroidery. In this very ornate style of shoe the needlework pattern takes the place of a buckle, but heels continue to be conspicuous, studded with stones, painted, inlaid and enameled. This detail alone makes the new evening shoes exceedingly costly.

Straw shoes and straw embroidery are the latest fancy in footwear for the country and the beach. These are brightly colored and are made in one of the sandal shapes, pumps or colonials. The needlework patterns are suggestive of both the peasant and the American Indian embroidery. This is done in straw which resembles the crocheted sports hats, on kid and even no linen, with which linen flowers are shown for the coat lapel.

Footwear is of more than passing interest this season. In shoes of all types there is a tendency to elaboration such as has not been accepted by well-dressed women since the days of ornate historic shoes. Apparently the boot is extinct.

In the better shoes a much finer quality is shown and in the greater number two leathers are used. Snake, lizard and even shark are made into the smartest models, almost always in combination with plain kid. As summer weather arrives fewer black shoes are shown, and almost none of the violent colors that were worn a few seasons ago are seen. In their stead are the natural grays and gentle shades of the skins, and in plain kids, pretty tans, beige, brown and taupe.

Lizard Skin, Gray Kid Trimming;

Gray in the light pearly shades is shown by bootmakers who cater to a fashionable clientele, and the most elegant shoes for afternoon and evening dress are sandals with Louis Quinze heel and one strap, made of plain leather or kid in delicate tones of the new blues, rose and all of the latest colors and in light and pastel shades. Kid is considered correct for the better shoes and comparatively little patent leather is shown except in combination with kid.

Ruffles Are Playing
Part in New Fashions

The use of ruffles is noticed on many of the dresses in the current Paris collections this spring. Skirts with many ruffles in front and straight backs are frequently seen. Taffeta afternoon dresses and georgette or chiffon evening frocks quite often take this way of inserting the necessary fullness while retaining the smart straight silhouette.

Cyber presents a dainty evening model of cool green georgette crepe in this style ornamented with a strip of strass embroidery. A darker green inset at the neck gives a pleasant effect.

Hand-Plaited Frocks
Among Dress Features

In the golden nineties women feared coming untied. Now they fear coming uncreased. For the plaits put in solely by hand are outstanding features of many of the spring frocks. Many of these dresses have no other trimming than the series of tiny plaits. The latter are so employed that they form stripes, checks, chevrons and even cubist designs. In other cases they are used to simulate a yoke, a bodice or even a belt.

Watch Your Woolens!

With the summer season, the moth miller is abroad hunting a good place to lay her eggs. She prefers woolens as a good place to deposit her eggs, for there will be good feeding for her young.

Keep the cover on your upholstered furniture, brushed at least once each week, remove all cushions, and use your electric cleaner now and then. DO NOT COVER YOUR FURNITURE WITH COVERS. The young moth will crawl thru the covering and destroy your coverings before you are aware of their presence.

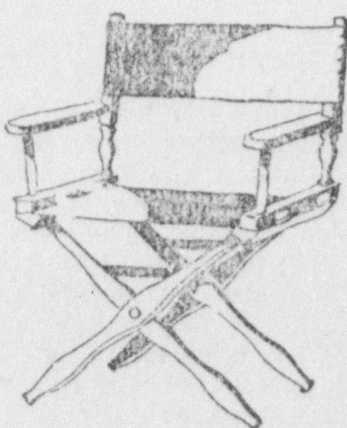

Place your woollen clothing and blankets in a moth-proof chest and cease to worry. We have just received a large shipment of "Treasure Chests" lined inside with red cedar, with walnut on the outside. They are beautifully finished and will add greatly to the beauty of the room, as well as serve as a protection to your clothing.

40 COUNTRIES IN BIG FARM CENSUS

Great Undertaking to Be Started in 1930.

Washington.—Forty countries of Europe, Asia and Africa are ready to co-operate with the United States in the colossal world census of agriculture, to be taken in Rome in 1930.

Leon M. Estabrook, United States agricultural commissioner, now on a tour of Mexico, western South America, the Dutch East Indies, and eastern and southern Asia, has been actively engaged in promoting the census since June, 1926.

The census will be the first effort ever made to inventory world agriculture. It follows the dream of David Lubin, founder of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome. Lubin was convinced the institute should not only serve as a clearing house for such statistics as might be supplied by adhering governments, but should take the lead in promoting better and more dependable information throughout the world.

As director of the world census, Estabrook has found that of 200 countries only 60 ever have taken an inventory of agriculture. Fewer than 40 of these have taken a census since 1900. In the last six years only four or five countries have taken censuses in the same year.

As a consequence no satisfactory comparable figures on international agricultural conditions are available. It is the object of the world census to make such figures available and to obtain statistics which will have a common meaning in all countries.

The census will take account of size of farms, kinds of farms according to well-recognized categories, area of arable or cultivated land, area allotted to each crop, and the production of each crop for the period covered by the census; also the number of livestock of each kind on each farm by age and sex.

The work of the census will be done in the assembly room of the international institute, a palatial structure erected by King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, from his private funds, and presented to agricultural interests of the world.

Tom Ballotti and Little Mike

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright)

A QUEER story, that of the stocky Tom Ballotti, who worked his hands raw and his face gaunt for the sake of a friend. Queer, because of the speech he made and the interpretations that followed. Did he mean just what he said, or was he shaking off praise in an attempt at modesty? Was he showing his feelings or hiding them? They still argue the question up in Mother Lode, though Tom had wandered away to other fields.

At the time of the story Tom was a rock miner. His name was not Tom or Ballotti, but that was as near as men could make it out. He ran it all together—"Tawbulotti"—and Tom Ballotti it became. One of the hundreds of miners working in the big mines, he walked up the trail at shift times, rode down the skips, and emerged gray with slime. No different from the rest. He had his enemies and his friends and one of the latter was Mike, Little Mike for distinction.

One day the whistle near the collar of the mine blew and as it was not time for the change of shifts, all in the little city dropped work and turned their heads toward the galleys and frame structures on the hill. In a body the town went to the mine and there discovered tragedy. There was no time to be lost, a tunnel had caved in. The only question was, "How many?" and the answer was, "eleven."

Everything stopped while the efforts of men were directed to releasing the eleven men from a prison of rock. Word came up there was danger in the job and no one would be ordered to the task. Who would volunteer? The son of the superintendent pulled off his coat, and was first in the skip. Tom Ballotti was second. There was a cheer when the car was filled and there was disappointment from the scores who were willing but who must wait.

From the first Tom Ballotti clung to his place in the crew. He made it known he would fight for the opportunity and was so determined there was no one who dared try to take his place.

"It is his friend down there, Little Mike," they said. "Tom is working to save his friend."

The crews worked in six-hour shifts and Tom took two out of each four. His short body and strong back were built for this sort of work in which men must crouch while they labor and strain. Tom shoved the rock and muck into the wheelbarrow after the smoke of each charge had blown away. He was the first to the nose of the tunnel to see what progress had been made. He would be the first to break through, if the rescue came on his shift. They all worked hard but none could do the work of Tom.

To the surface he came, plastered with grime, with a face of dead gray through which burned his agonized eyes. The man was suffering, physically and emotionally. His friend was below, his bones and his muscles were aching and his arms and back were bleeding. Tom slept six hours, worked six more, and kept at it, until the blast gave forth a new and hollow sound and a rush of air signaled that the wall was pierced.

Tom Ballotti was the first one through. The rest crowded after. "They are alive," he said, and he patted Little Mike gently. Then came the painful, terrible delay while the tortuous passage was made wide enough to accommodate the stretchers. The weakened men were given stimulants and then shoved back over the rock to the shaft. When they reached the surface, ghosts of men smiling weakly, there was a mighty cheer.

Men praised the rescuers and most of all Tom Ballotti. He tried to escape but they seized him.

"Fine, Tom," they said. "He worked double shift to save his friend."

"And Little Mike," Tom said, "How is he now?"

"See for yourself. He is eating; see him! He is smiling again."

"Little Mike," said Tom Ballotti, stopping before the rescued miner and speaking that all might hear: "You owe me $18. You have owed it to me for three months. When are you going to pay?"

There was a gasp, an incredulous gasp. Could it be Tom Ballotti has been thinking of his money? What a thing to say!

"He is no friend at all, that Tom Ballotti, thinking of his $18."

And they let him walk away alone. He has gone now, to the placer fields where there is no rock to cave in. There are some who tell his story to show how selfish a man may be. Once in a while some one puts forth the theory that Tom didn't mean it at all; that he was embarrassed and had sought to escape their praise. That is the story and the argument. A queer fellow, Tom Ballotti.

Pure Air for President

President Coolidge has an "air purifier" on his desk at the White House. The instrument consists of a tall amber-colored glass jar with a dome-shaped glass top. Inside this jar are little cubes of a camphor preparation which resemble lumps of sugar. Between calls the President lifts the lid for a few seconds. A strong trace of camphor quickly permeates the air, stifling other odors and "purifying the air."

Trucking Business In Circleville, Wefler Brothers, Lancaster Pike, Has Been In Family Name Seventy Odd Years.

Some seventy-odd years ago, Frederick Wefler, father of late Christian Wefler, established a trucking business on the Lancaster pike in this city; following his death his son, Christian Wefler, succeeded to the business which he successfully conducted for a number of years, transferring the business to his sons, William and George Wefler who since that time have conducted it under the name of Wefler Bros.

In the good old days when the business was established and for a number of years thereafter, the work on the truck patch was done similar to the methods employed now depending strictly on weather conditions, now under the more progressive methods employed, the weather as far as rainfall is concerned, can go hang, as a large portion of the patch is under the March Irrigation System, which after the water is turned on works automatically. The firm stake up and amputate the suckers from their tomato vines which is a saving of at least one-third of the crop as compared to the old-fashioned method of letting the vines run wild on the ground.

This enterprising firm have under cultivation at present 7,000 tomato vines, 10,000 cabbages, 5 acres of beets, 4 acres of spinach, 1 acre of onions and 5 acres of sweet-corn and a large number of their justly celebrated tip-top canteloupes. The firm is assisted in the conduct of the business by Frederick Wefler, the second, a son of the senior member of the firm, Mr. William Wefler.

The firm is a member of the Pickaway County Vegetable Growers' Association of the Farm Bureau, the members of the firm are genial, wholesouled gentlemen of Swiss extraction and are deserving of the continued success they have enjoyed.

Thousands Being Trained for Productive Work.

Rome.—Woman's place is in the home, but not necessarily her own home, according to woman Fascist organizations which are training several hundred thousand girls and women for productive occupations closely connected with domesticity.

Signora Eliza Majer Rizzoli, head of the feminine Fascists, said the nation's crying need for nurses would have been satisfied within a few years. Five thousand trained nurses have been graduated in special courses, and 35,000 more are being trained. More than a hundred thousand women are being instructed as scientific farmers with the intention of relieving men of such work as animal breeding, truck gardening, fruit farming and horticulture of all types.

Premier Mussolini, believing "a mother's kitchen budget to be the cornerstone of healthy national economy," has instructed women to carry out propaganda in favor of home rather than imported products. The organized groups train each member as a lecturer, and provide her with data that even casual conversations prove of propagandistic utility. Feminine Fascists advise producers of the necessity of changes and improvements.

The most far-reaching of the six roles assigned to women by Il Duce—the others being propagandistic, sanitary, agricultural, scholastic and protection of home products—is "moral tutelage of labor," which means that social work among laboring classes of both sexes is their duty.

Despite the fact that a principle of Fascism is to keep women out of political activity, it is pointed out that they have equal rights in "politics" of the new national labor unions.

In several unions women have commanding positions. Some say that women will be permitted to be deputies when the present chamber of deputies, conforming with Mussolini's plan, is transformed into a "chamber of labor" representing the productive population of Italy by trades and professions instead of by geographical regions.

Developing Palestine

Although economic conditions in Palestine are still primitive, modern methods are making headway, and there are good prospects of development and progress. The country is generally fertile, and cereals, grapes, olives and various fruits are produced, while sheep and goats thrive in the lowlands, and in the mountains in time of drought.

FLYING CHAFF

He who hopes for the best seldom expects it.

The most useful of all measures is the golden rule.

Don't wait until your ship comes in. Row out to meet it.

Tomorrow may bring the final reckoning.—Spurgeon.

It's rather odd that so many people are trying to get even.

There are only two kind of liars in a smash-up; both drivers.

We would all like to be heroes, but alas, it is much easier to be zeros.

When the worst comes to the worst it's up to us to make the best of it.

Never stand on your dignity; there's nothing in the world so slippery.

A man used to being helped finds himself helpless in almost any male group.

Successive small sacrifices may work more good in the world than one large one.

Some men are so mean that they even refuse to let their wives have the last word.

It is the talent of human nature to run from one extreme to another.—Jonathan Swift.

The theories a man gets in his head are apt to cause a lot of trouble when they are exploded.

The nightingale is no more interesting than the midnight cat to the man who wants to sleep.

Put Chivalry Before

Desire of His Heart

As a wooer Sir Thomas More seems to have been more philosophic than ardent. He made the acquaintance of a gentleman who had three daughters and the second of these he says he deemed "the fairest and best favored," but restrained his passion for her because he "considered that it would be both grief and shame to the eldest to see her younger sister preferred before her in marriage."

Accordingly "of a certain pity" he "framed his fancy toward" the eldest daughter and married her in 1505.

The union was harmonious, but she died after six years and he married a widow. She, however, lacked the one desirable faculty in a wife—the ability to appreciate her husband's jests. But if Erasmus is truthful, More philosophically made her defect a means of controlling her garrulity.

Whenever her wagging tongue threatened his peace of mind he would tell her a joke the point of which he was sure would puzzle her; and thus the author of Utopia was left alone with his literary labors, and, presumably, to prepare a fresh supply of humorous ammunition.—Kansas City Star.

Charleston in Ireland

The Charleston has been included in the annual dancing tournament between cities of Ulster, Ireland. It is not classed as one of the regular dances, such as the fox trot, waltz and tango, but is given a special and separate competition. The tournament this year was conducted in Victoria hall, Belfast, by the Ulster Amateur Dancing championship, and every amateur dancer in Ulster was eligible. The first prize was a loving cup presented by the lord mayor of Belfast when the contest was inaugurated three years ago. Miss Katherine Watson of Derry judged the trials, and admitted that Belfast had better dancers than Derry.

Clean by Electricity

The uses of electric cleaners are many, especially those which can be reversed to blow as well as inhale. One was rushed into a coal mine at Bicknell, Ind., in 1923 to pump air to miners imprisoned by rock falls after an explosion. A householder used one last winter to blow warm air down between his house walls to thaw out a frozen water pipe. Another effectually defeated beetles whose larvae, previously uncapturable, damaged the rafters of an English castle. An American farmer uses one regularly each summer to separate leaves from berries that have been picked and spread out on a sheet.

Jungle Youth Resilient

Youth also flames in darkest Africa. The Presbyterian board of foreign missions reports that evangelistic work in West Africa is becoming increasingly difficult. In the old days the boys and girls stayed at home and obeyed the tribal laws. Now they go chasing off to other tribes while still in their teens, and the dusky elders do not know how to handle them. Apparently this "revolt of youth" is going on in the jungle as well as in the United States.—Capper's Weekly.

CITY COUNCIL IN SESSION JULY SIXTH

Fines and Licenses to the Amount of $777.10 Collected by Mayor in June.

The city council met in regular session Wednesday evening, July 6, with President John C. Goeller, presiding, and the following members present; Baker, Landenberger, Leist, Marion and Wolf. Mayor Fitzpatrick reported fines, licenses and fees collected during the month of June in the sum of $777.10 and on motion of Mr. Wolf this report was received and placed on file.

Mr. Baker offered a motion which carried that the trustees of the Lutheran church be granted permission to use the alley next to their premises for the storage of materials during the construction of the new building.

Amos Wilkerson requested permission to construct a curb along the line of his lot at the corner of Pickaway and Union streets and this was referred to the service committee.

Barton Walters, on behalf of the Norfolk and Western Railway company, requested council to pass the ordinance granting said company permission to construct a side track on Huston street.

An ordinance determining to proceed to improve Pickaway street by constructing an extension to the Pickaway street storm water sewer, with a branch or lateral on Mill street, was introduced and read for the first time.

An ordinance determining to proceed to improve Pickaway, Ohio, Washington and Clinton streets and Half avenue, by constructing an extension to the Huston street storm water sewer, was introduced and read for the first time.

An ordinance granting permission to the Norfolk and Western Railway company the right to construct and maintain a switch or side track over Canal and Ohio streets was read for the second time.

An ordinance entitled an ordinance granting permission to Norfolk and Western Railway company to lay down, operate and maintain a railroad track in Huston street was read for the second time.

Mayor Fitzpatrick stated that several citizens living on Fairview avenue had asked for street lights. Mr. Baker stated that lights had been asked for on East Ohio street and Weldon avenue, and also that a petition had been presented asking for a light on Court street at the intersection of Folsom avenue. President Goeller referred these petitions to the service committee.

Solicitor Weldon asked council to decide upon the dates for the expiration and payment of the bonds to be issued to pay for the construction of the storm water sewers on Pickaway and Ohio streets. Mr. Baker offered a motion which was seconded that this request be referred to the finance committee, the city solicitor, auditor and clerk of council and this was adopted.

A communication from the Chesapeake and Hocking Railway company accepting the amendment to ordinance No. 566 providing the contract terms and conditions for the crossing of Mill, Main and Mound streets and consenting that the bond heretofore given by said railway company shall apply to said ordinance as amended, was received and placed on record.

First Autos in New York

According to the November, 1895, issue of the Horseless Age, a Frenchman, Roger, brought three horseless carriages to New York in June of that year. They were run around the city streets to advertise R. H. Macy's department store. In 1896 Barnum & Bailey advertised that they would exhibit a horseless vehicle as part of their show.

Gayly Ornamented
Shoes for Summer

Brocade, Straw, Kid, Novelty Leathers Are Used
in New Models.

An extravagant style in shoes for the summer is the embroidered slipper for evening, and gay shoes of different sorts are shown for the country. Dress shoes are elaborate. A unique model is made of rich brocade, with a vamp jeweled embroidery. In this very ornate style of shoe the needlework pattern takes the place of a buckle, but heels continue to be conspicuous, studded with stones, painted, inlaid and enameled. This detail alone makes the new evening shoes exceedingly costly.

Straw shoes and straw embroidery are the latest fancy in footwear for the country and the beach. These are brightly colored and are made in one of the sandal shapes, pumps or colonials. The needlework patterns are suggestive of both the peasant and the American Indian embroidery. This is done in straw which resembles the crocheted sports hats, on kid and even no linen, with which linen flowers are shown for the coat lapel.

Footwear is of more than passing interest this season. In shoes of all types there is a tendency to elaboration such as has not been accepted by well-dressed women since the days of ornate historic shoes. Apparently the boot is extinct.

In the better shoes a much finer quality is shown and in the greater number two leathers are used. Snake, lizard and even shark are made into the smartest models, almost always in combination with plain kid. As summer weather arrives fewer black shoes are shown, and almost none of the violent colors that were worn a few seasons ago are seen. In their stead are the natural grays and gentle shades of the skins, and in plain kids, pretty tans, beige, brown and taupe.

Lizard Skin, Gray Kid Trimming;

Gray in the light pearly shades is shown by bootmakers who cater to a fashionable clientele, and the most elegant shoes for afternoon and evening dress are sandals with Louis Quinze heel and one strap, made of plain leather or kid in delicate tones of the new blues, rose and all of the latest colors and in light and pastel shades. Kid is considered correct for the better shoes and comparatively little patent leather is shown except in combination with kid.

Ruffles Are Playing
Part in New Fashions

The use of ruffles is noticed on many of the dresses in the current Paris collections this spring. Skirts with many ruffles in front and straight backs are frequently seen. Taffeta afternoon dresses and georgette or chiffon evening frocks quite often take this way of inserting the necessary fullness while retaining the smart straight silhouette.

Cyber presents a dainty evening model of cool green georgette crepe in this style ornamented with a strip of strass embroidery. A darker green inset at the neck gives a pleasant effect.

Hand-Plaited Frocks
Among Dress Features

In the golden nineties women feared coming untied. Now they fear coming uncreased. For the plaits put in solely by hand are outstanding features of many of the spring frocks. Many of these dresses have no other trimming than the series of tiny plaits. The latter are so employed that they form stripes, chevrons and even cubist designs. In other cases they are used to simulate a yoke, a bodice or even a belt.

Watch Your Woolens!

With the summer season, the moth miller is abroad hunting a good place to lay her eggs. She prefers woolens as a good place to deposit her eggs, for there will be good feeding for her young.

Keep the cover on your upholstered furniture, brushed at least once each week, remove all cushions, and use your electric cleaner now and then. DO NOT COVER YOUR FURNITURE WITH COVERS. The young moth will crawl thru the covering and destroy your coverings before you are aware of their presence.

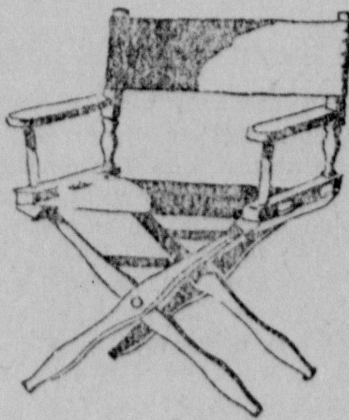

Place your woolen clothing and blankets in a moth-proof chest and cease to worry. We have just received a large shipment of "Treasure Chests" lined inside with red cedar, with walnut on the outside.

They are beautifully finished and will add greatly to the beauty of the room, as well as serve as a protection to your clothing.

40 COUNTRIES IN BIG FARM CENSUS

Great Undertaking to Be Started in 1930.

Washington.—Forty countries of Europe, Asia and Africa are ready to co-operate with the United States in the colossal world census of agriculture, to be taken in Rome in 1930.

Leon M. Estabrook, United States agricultural commissioner, now on a tour of Mexico, western South America, the Dutch East Indies, and eastern and southern Asia, has been actively engaged in promoting the census since June, 1926.

The census will be the first effort ever made to inventory world agriculture. It follows the dream of David Lubin, founder of the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome. Lubin was convinced the institute should not only serve as a clearing house for such statistics as might be supplied by adhering governments, but should take the lead in promoting better and more dependable information throughout the world.

As director of the world census, Estabrook has found that of 200 countries only 60 ever have taken an inventory of agriculture. Fewer than 40 of these have taken a census since 1900. In the last six years only four or five countries have taken censuses in the same year.

As a consequence no satisfactory comparable figures on international agricultural conditions are available. It is the object of the world census to make such figures available and to obtain statistics which will have a common meaning in all countries.

The census will take account of size of farms, kinds of farms according to well-recognized categories, area of arable or cultivated land, area allotted to each crop, and the production of each crop for the period covered by the census; also the number of livestock of each kind on each farm by age and sex.

The work of the census will be done in the assembly room of the international institute, a palatial structure erected by King Victor Emmanuel of Italy, from his private funds, and presented to agricultural interests of the world.

It pays to Advertise.

Tom Ballotti and Little Mike

By AD SCHUSTER

(Copyright.)

A QUEER story, that of the stocky Tom Ballotti, who worked his hands raw and his face gaunt for the sake of a friend. Queer, because of the speech he made and the interpretations that followed. Did he mean just what he said, or was he shaking off praise in an attempt at modesty? Was he showing his feelings or hiding them? They still argue the question up in Mother Lode, though Tom had wandered away to other fields.

At the time of the story Tom was a rock miner. His name was not Tom or Ballotti, but that was as near as men could make it out. He ran it all together—"Tawbulotti"—and Tom Ballotti it became. One of the hundreds of miners working in the big mines, he walked up the trail at shift times, rode down the skips, and emerged gray with slime. No different from the rest. He had his enemies and his friends and one of the latter was Mike. Little Mike for distinction.

One day the whistle near the collar of the mine blew and as it was not time for the change of shifts, all in the little city dropped work and turned their heads toward the gallows and frame structures on the hill. In a body the town went to the mine and there discovered tragedy. There was no time to be lost, a tunnel had caved in. The only question was: "How many?" and the answer was, "eleven."

Everything stopped while the efforts of men were directed to releasing the eleven men from a prison of rock. Work came up there was danger in the job and no one would be ordered to the task. Who would volunteer? The son of the superintendent pulled off his coat, and was first in the skip. Tom Ballotti was second. There was a cheer when the car was filled and there was disappointment from the scores who were willing but who must wait.

From the first Tom Ballotti clung to his place in the crew. He made it known he would fight for the opportunity and was so determined there was no one who dared try to take his place.

"It is his friend down there, Little Mike," they said. "Tom is working to save his friend."

The crews worked in six-hour shifts and Tom took two out of each four. His short body and strong back were built for this sort of work in which men must crouch while they labor and strain. Tom shoved the rock and muck into the wheelbarrow after the smoke of each charge had blown away. He was the first to the nose of the tunnel to see what progress had been made. He would be the first to break through, if the rescue came on his shift. They all worked hard but none could do the work of Tom.

To the surface he came, plastered with grime, with a face of dead gray through which burned his agonized eyes. The man was suffering, physically and emotionally. His friend was below, his bones and his muscles were aching and his arms and back were bleeding. Tom slept six hours, worked six more, and kept at it, until the blast gave forth a new and hollow sound and a rush of air signaled that the wall was pierced.

Tom Ballotti was the first one through. The rest crowded after. "They are alive," he said, and he patted Little Mike gently. Then came the painful, terrible delay while the tortuous passage was made wide enough to accommodate the stretchers. The weakened men were given stimulants and then shoved back over the rock to the shaft. When they reached the surface, ghosts of men smiling weakly, there was a mighty cheer.

Men praised the rescuers and most of all Tom Ballotti. He tried to escape but they seized him.

"Fine, Tom," they said. "He worked double shift to save his friend."

"And Little Mike," Tom said, "How is he now?"

"See for yourself. He is eating; see him! He is smiling again."

"Little Mike," said Tom Ballotti, stopping before the rescued miner and speaking that all might hear: "You owe me $18. You have owed it to me for three months. When are you going to pay?"

There was a gasp, an incredulous gasp. Could it be Tom Ballotti has been thinking of his money? What a thing to say!

"He is no friend at all, that Tom Ballotti, thinking of his $18."

And they let him walk away alone. He has gone now, to the placer fields where there is no rock to cave in. There are some who tell his story to show how selfish a man may be. Once in a while some one puts forth the theory that Tom didn't mean it at all; that he was embarrassed and had sought to escape their praise. That is the story and the argument. A queer fellow, Tom Ballotti.

Pure Air for President

President Coolidge has an "air purifier" on his desk at the White House. The instrument consists of a tall amber-colored glass jar with a dome-shaped glass top. Inside this jar are little cubes of a camphor preparation which resemble lumps of sugar. Between callers the President lifts the lid for a few seconds. A strong trace of camphor quickly permeates the air, stifling other odors and "purifying the air."

OLDEST ESTABLISHED

Trucking Business In Circleville, Wefler Brothers, Lancaster Pike, Has Been In Family Name Seventy Odd Years.

Some seventy-odd years ago, Frederick Wefler, father of late Christian Wefler, established a trucking business on the Lancaster pike in this city; following his death his son, Christian Wefler, succeeded to the business which he successfully conducted for a number of years, transferring the business to his sons, William and George Wefler who since that time have conducted it under the name of Wefler Bros.

In the good old days when the business was established and for a number of years thereafter, the work on the truck patch was done similar to the methods employed now depending strictly on weather conditions, now under the more progressive methods employed, the weather as far as rainfall is concerned, can go hang, as a large portion of the patch is under the March Irrigation System, which after the water is turned on works automatically. The firm stake up and amputate the suckers from their tomato vines which is a saving of at least one-third of the crop as compared to the old-fashioned method of letting the vines run wild on the ground.

This enterprising firm have under cultivation at present 7,000 tomato vines, 10,000 cabbages, 5 acres of beets, 4 acres of spinach, 1 acre of onions and 5 acres of sweet-corn and a large number of their justly celebrated tip-top canteloupes. The firm is assisted in the conduct of the business by Frederick Wefler, the second, a son of the senior member of the firm, Mr. William Wefler.

The firm is a member of the Pickaway County Vegetable Growers' Association of the Farm Bureau, the members of the firm are genial, wholesouled gentlemen of Swiss extraction and are deserving of the continued success they have enjoyed.

WOMEN ACTIVE IN ITALY'S FASCISTI

Thousands Being Trained for Productive Work.

Rome.—Woman's place is in the home, but not necessarily her own home, according to woman Fascist organizations which are training several hundred thousand girls and woman for productive occupations closely connected with domesticity.

Signora Eliza Majer Rizzoli, head of the feminine Fascists, said the nation's crying need for nurses would have been satisfied within a few years. Five thousand trained nurses have been graduated in special courses, and 35,000 more are being trained. More than a hundred thousand women are being instructed as scientific farmers with the intention of relieving men of such work as animal breeding, truck gardening, fruit farming and horticulture of all types.

Premier Mussolini, believing "a mother's kitchen budget to be the cornerstone of healthy national economy," has instructed women to carry out propaganda in favor of home rather than imported products. The organized groups train each member as a lecturer, and provide her with data that even casual conversations prove of propagandistic utility. Feminine Fascists advise producers of the necessity of changes and improvements.

The most far-reaching of the six roles assigned to women by Il Duce—the others being propagandistic, sanitary, agricultural, scholastic and protection of home products—is "moral tutelage of labor," which means that social work among laboring classes of both sexes is their duty.

Despite the fact that a principle of Fascism is to keep women out of political activity, it is pointed out that they have equal rights in "politics" of the new national labor unions.

In several unions women have commanding positions. Some say that women will be permitted to be deputies when the present chamber of deputies, conforming with Mussolini's plan, is transformed into a "chamber of labor" representing the productive population of Italy by trades and professions instead of by geographical regions.

Developing Palestine

Although economic conditions in Palestine are still primitive, modern methods are making headway, and there are good prospects of development and progress. The country is generally fertile, and cereals, grapes, olives and various fruits are produced, while sheep and goats thrive in the lowlands, and in the mountains in time of drought.
